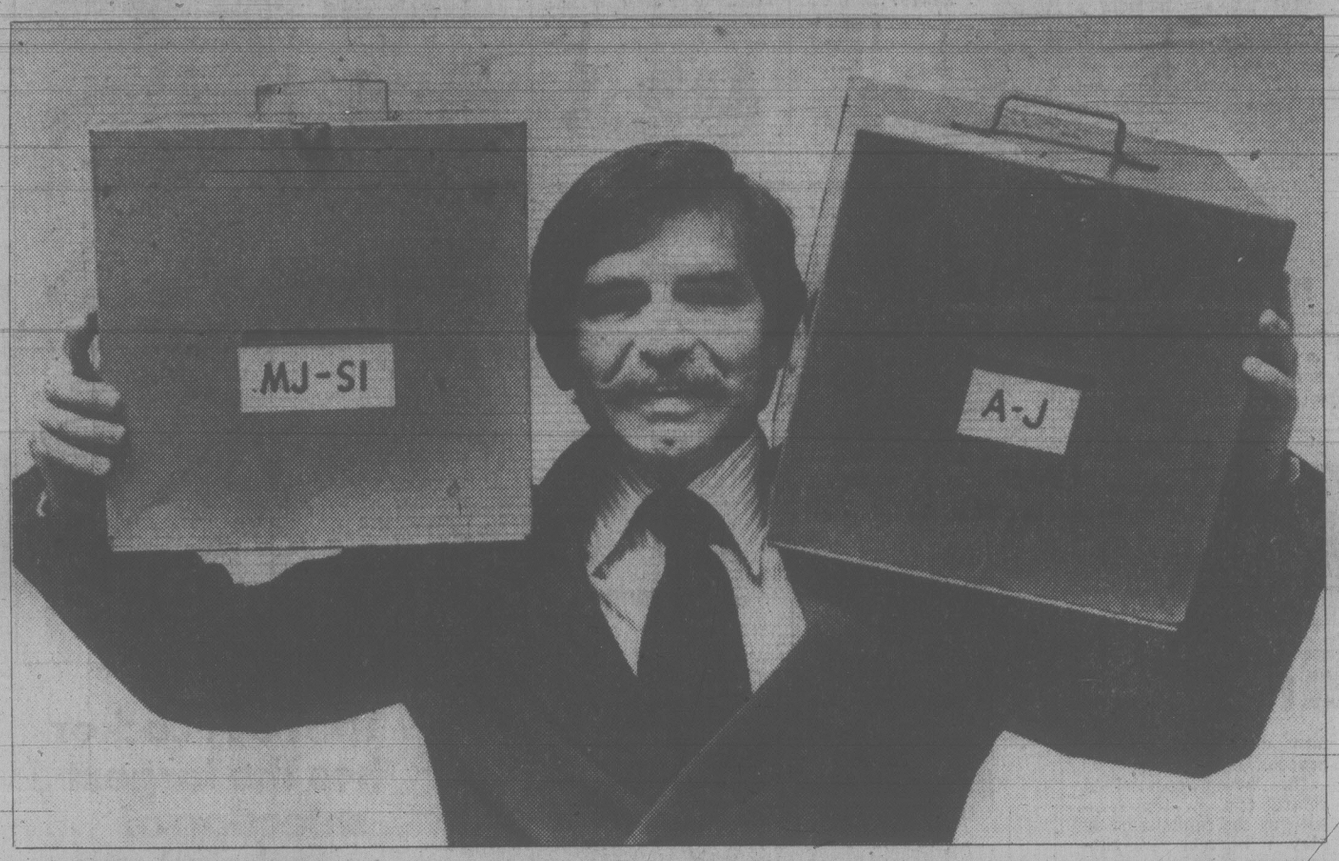
$30M N-Plant Sabotage Bid



EXERCISING HIS BALLOTS — and biceps — Victoria returning officer Mike Hutchison this morning declared himself ready for the fray Thursday when 61,200 Victorians get their chance to tell the politicians how they've done since the 1975 general election. His advice to voters; try to go to the polls between 10 a.m and 3 p.m. The polls open at 8 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. (Bill Halkett photo.)

New Power Facilities Killed by Congress

Times News Services

The House of Representatives Interior Committee, meanwhile, voted overwhelmingly today for a moratorium on construction permits for proposed nuclear power plants.

Vepco inspectors discovered Monday that a corrosive white crystalline substance had been dumped into 62 of 64 fresh, unradiated nuclear fuel elements being stored in a building near its Surry reactor in southeast Virginia.

The fuel was intended for the utility firm's Surry No. 2 unit and represented about one-third of the total fuel needed to operate the unit for a year, utility officials said.

Company officials said today they have cleaned about half the polluted uranium fuel elements.

Vepco vice-president C.M. Stallings told a news conference today, "We completed a preliminary cleanup on 30 of the elements Tuesday night." He said he wasn't sure how long the entire cleaning process would take.

Calling the incident "suspected willful damage," Vepco spokesman August Wallmeyer said the FBI's Richmond office has begun investigating all those who have had recent access to the plant's fuel storage area.

"Obviously, this leads to a whole raft of problems," Wallmeyer said, noting that chief among them is concern over plant security.

"At this point, it's a little early to speculate, but it's a secure plant . . . and it would lead you to believe that it would come from the inside," said Richmond FBI agent Sherrill Law.

At a news conference in Tuesday, Stallings said pollution of the fuel elements had "no effect on the health and safety of the general public or Vepco employees."

The fuel, according to Vepco, began arriving at Surry in February and had been in normal condition then. On April 18, two of the 64 fuel units were inspected and found to be normal.

Stallings said Vepco has no way of knowing whether all the fuel units were unpolluted on that date, but he said he thinks the caustic substance —between a couple of cups to a gallon in each unit — was dumped in "over a period of time."

Security at the Surry plant, located near Jamestown on the James River about 140 miles from Washington, is heavy, Vepco officials said. Entrance to the storage area was restricted to persons who had special "card keys" to open the doors.

Stallings noted, however, that the fuel storage building usually is empty when no fuel is being taken in or out so it would have been possible for someone to move about the fuel elements unobserved.

Cloudy Skies Predicted For Voting

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Clouds will roll in over southern Vancouver Island early Thursday and sprinkle Greater Victoria voters with rain in the afternoon.

But the sombre word from the weatherman isn't expected to dissuade many from voting in B.C.'s 32nd general election, observers say, because the advance poll turnout indicated unusually high interest here.

The polls open at 8 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

Victoria returning officer Mike Hutchison today had some last-minute advice for voters: pick your time to go to the polls.

He said there is always a rush of voters as soon as polls open, and again just before closing.

The best time to cast a ballot is between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., except of course the noon rush which is also a popular voting time, Hutchison said.

That redistribution added another riding to northern Vancouver Island, dividing the Island into nine constituencies with 10 MLAs. Victoria elects two representatives.

There are 1,673,638 registered voters in the province.

Victoria has 61,200 registered to vote, Saanich and the Islands 42,242, Oak Bay-Gordon Head just over 31,000 and Esquimalt-Port Renfrew 34,792.

Voter turnout in Victoria in 1975 was 70.01 per cent, just over the provincial average of 69.76 per cent. In Esquimalt last time, 73.14 per cent voted.

Both Saanich and the Islands with 78.26 per cent and Oak Bay with 78.94 per cent were among the highest in the province.

If a voter discovers his name has been omitted from the voter's list, but feels he is entitled to vote, he can cast a sealed ballot which will be held until his eligibility has been confirmed.

If the voter is found to be eligible, his vote will be counted on the final count May 23 to 25.

Victoria Losing 60 Income Tax Jobs to Surrey

Victoria will lose 60 jobs with the transfer of taxation processing operations to the Lower Mainland, Vancouver Island Revenue Canada director T.S. Blanchard said today.

The positions are mainly clerical and involve preliminary processing of tax forms.

The move also means taxpayers on the Island must deal with the Surrey office instead of Victoria.

The cutback reduces the local Revenue Canada work force from 230 to 170, but there will be a small increase as the audit functions expand. About 10 auditing jobs will be created by 1980, Blanchard said.

The major transfer to Surrey is the result of a new tax processing system.

At present all tax forms go first to Ottawa for computer check and then back to Victoria for detailed processing.

Starting next spring, all tax forms from B.C. and Alberta will go directly to Surrey where more than 1,000 employees will give them the computer check and the subsequent processing operations.

Instead of communicating with the Victoria office on any follow-up, taxpayers would contact the Surrey office.

Files of local taxpayers will be transferred from Victoria to Surrey.

Blanchard said the Revenue Canada office in Victoria will become mainly a field unit for tax investigations.

The Victoria office space created by the transfer will be turned over to the federal ministry of public works. It is believed some other federal ministry will occupy the extra space in 1980.

Transfer of some employees to Surrey is already under way although the process will not be completed until year's end.

U.N. Forces Confront Israelis in Lebanon

United Press International

Israeli troops backed by tanks and armored cars thrust into Lebanon today in pursuit of a Palestinian suicide squad that fought an hour-long battle inside Israel at a communal settlement.

The Israelis withdrew when the U.N. forces confronted them , U.N. spokesmen in Beirut and Tel Aviv said.

"Our forces were instructed to stand firm," the U.N. spokesman in Tel Aviv said.

Police sources in Beirut said aircraft, presumably Israeli, buzzed the Lebanese capital but drew heavy Palestinian anti-aircraft fire.

The U.N. spokesman in Beirut said the Israelis took up positions in an area controlled by U.N. peacekeeping forces, searched a village but withdrew six hours later,

The Palestinian suicide team infiltrated into the northern Israeli settlement of Marana and fought an hour-long battle with an Israeli patrol, losing two men, the Palestine Front for the Liberation of Palestine said.

The U.N. spokesman said two platoons of Irish U.N. soldiers squared off with the larger Israeli force one mile outside Chaqra, about six miles west of the border with Lebanon and across from Manara, where the Palestinian commandos struck.

Independent reports from southern Lebanon said about 450 Israeli soldiers backed by 20 tanks, 28 armored personnel carriers and 28 jeeps were involved in the pursuit operation.

A Real Wall St. Bare

NEW YORK (AP) — Muggers miscalculated when they thought a naked man would hesitate to chase them through the Wall Street financial district of Manhattan in midafternoon.

Wearing only shoes and socks, with his attache case for a "fig leaf," stamp dealer Zoltan Gordon Bana raced from a subway station entrance in pursuit of two youths who had robbed him Tuesday and forced him to strip.

A startled police officer, Frank Weber, who was heading back to work from his lunch break, picked up the pursuit and arrested one suspect. The other escaped.

Man Killed In Blaze

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — One man died today and three others were taken to hospital as a result of apartment fires here and in Burnaby.

Both buildings were evacuated in the early-morning blazes but residents were later allowed to return to their suites.

No Gas Crisis Ad Campaign

Provincial Tourism minister Elwood Veitch today announced he will immediately launch an advertising campaign in California, Oregon and Washington State advising Americans there is no gasoline shortage in B.C.

He was responding to a request from the Victoria tourist industry after some hotels here reported cancellations by Americans who earlier had planned to visit Vancouver Island this summer.

The danger of lost tourist business was discussed by officials of his ministry at a meeting Tuesday and those discussions, plus the request from the Victoria tourist industry, led to his decision this morning to begin a campaign right away, Veitch said.

Funds have already been approved for external advertising and some of this money will be diverted into the emergency campaign.

Visitors Information Centre Ed Higgin said he was delighted by the announcement but that didn't mean the problem had been completely solved.

He said the reports from California get worse. Motorists don't want to drive further from home than half a tank of gas will take them.

Vandal Threat to Girls' Game

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

About 120 young girls may be denied the fun of Little League softball unless something can be done to correct a chronic vandalism problem caused by "punks" at a small neighborhood park in Gordon Head.

The warning will go to Saanich council in a letter from Art Parsons, president of the Gordon Head Little League, who told the Times Tuesday the situation at Blair Park has become intolerable.

He said he has asked Mayor Mel Couvelier for urgent help to ensure the park can be used for the remainder of the league's short nine-week season. The mayor responded by asking him to present his request to a special council meeting next Monday.

Parsons said Blair Park has been hit by vandals twice in the last two weeks. Portable dugouts — worth in materials alone about $250 each wholesale — have been overturned and practically destroyed, with obscenities spray-painted across them.

"A large wooden bench which was last seen high in a tree has now disappeared from the park," he said.

The park is used for softball by 120 girls aged 8 to 12. Two games have already had to be cancelled and Parsons says he doesn't know how much longer the girls can continue trying to play there with makeshift repairs.

With the risk of jagged nails and splinters of wood he doesn't believe it's safe for play. And although the league's coaches are dedicated he says it's unfair to expect them to rebuild the facilities before each game.

"To fold a league because of a handful of juvenile delinquents would be heartbreaking for our youngsters," he added.

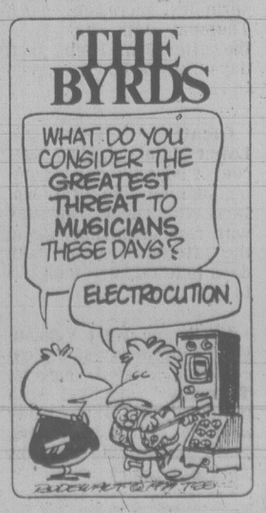
"I have raised five children here and I am just appalled to think that a few punks could force 120 girls out of a youth activity. I can't believe this situation can exist."

Parsons said when he spoke to the mayor this week Couvelier mentioned the possibility of providing permanent concrete dugouts.

He said Saanich police told him it was impossible to provide adequate supervision of public parks with only three officers and two cars assigned to the eastern portion of the municipality.

Police Chief Bob Peterson confirmed today the department doesn't have enough officers to do a proper job of enforcement.

But he said he is aware of the problem at Blair Park and in that general area of Gordon Head. The community services division has been asked to come up with "strategies" along the prevention theme.



Soviets, U.S. Reach Pact On Curbing N-Weapons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union announced today they have reached general agreement on a SALT II pact for further limitation of strategic weapons.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, the principal U.S. arms negotiator for the past two years, made the historic announcement at the White House nearly seven years after the second round of strategic arms limitation talks began.

Some technical drafting problems have to be worked out by teams of negotiators in Geneva before the full treaty package is released.

That work is expected to take two or three weeks, but no major difficulties are anticipated.

The negotiations, which began in 1972, produced a 100-page treaty package that will limit each side to 2,250 nuclear weapon launchers or bombers by the end of 1981. It will also limit the kinds of technology that can be used in the launchers.

Critics claim Soviet compliance with SALT II is not verifiable, especially with the loss of two key U.S. monitoring bases in Iran. They contend the treaty guarantees the Soviets an unacceptable edge in total nuclear explosives — 10.8 million pounds to the U.S. total of 7.2 million pounds.

Backers of the treaty say that is essentially offset by the U.S. superiority in the number of warheads — 9,550 to the Soviet total of 4,950.

The new agreement incorporates several historic firsts:

—The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed on exact parity of launchers in their nuclear arsenals.

—The Soviets have produced figures on their own nuclear arsenal, the "data base" that will be the starting point for the weapons limits.

—Actual destruction of nuclear weapons will be involved, including 270 on the Soviet side to get them under the 2,250 limit before the end of 1981. Both sides must be down to 2,400 launchers within six months of the treaty going into effect.

The package includes a treaty that consists of a preamble and 19 articles. It limits the total nuclear arsenals on both sides, but also places sublimits on certain kinds of weapons, including 820 land-based ICBMs with multiple warheads, 1,320 missiles or bombers to be counted as Mirvs, and 1,200 Mirv missiles.

Gagging Ruff 'an Error'

Labor Minister Allan Williams said today the Human Rights Commission erred in instructing Human Rights Branch director Kathleen Ruff to keep quiet on human rights matters before the commission.

Williams said the commission has no authority to issue such an instruction and added he plans to meet with commission members later in the month to be sure they get the message.

On Monday the B.C. Civil Liberties Association released a letter sent by commission chairman Margaret Strongitharm to Ruff on March 23 in which Strongitharm said the commission had passed a motion instructing Ruff "to refrain from making any statements to the media on any matters that may come before the commission or board of inquiry."

The letter appeared to contradict a news release issued by the commission on May 1 wherein Strongitharm denied press allegations the commission was seeking either directly or indirectly to constrain the freedom of speech of the branch director.

"There is no substance to this allegation," the news release said.

Williams said the commission has no say in how the branch should be run. Under the legislation they are separate bodies only connected by the role Ruff plays as chief executive officer of the commission.

Mass Grave Tells of Final Terror by Amin

SOROTI, Uganda (AP) — A mass grave holding an estimated 200 bodies of Ugandans killed by troops loyal to deposed dictator Idi Amin was discovered in Soroti's military police compound Tuesday, soldiers said.

Near the pit — stacked to within two metres of its top with the bodies of men, women and children — are three similar graves, all empty.

Tanzanian and anti-Amin Ugandan soldiers showed the graves to the first reporters to reach Soroti, 191 kilometres northeast of the capital city of Kampala. The town was taken Friday.

One of the empty pits was more than three metres long, about one metre wide and 10 metres deep. Soldiers said bodies "were piled like sacks on a truck" in the full grave that apparently was the same size. Reporters did not see the bodies, which Tanzanian soldiers had covered with a thin layer of earth.

Air force Lieut. Joseph Obonyo, 36, a Ugandan exile who returned with the Tanzanians to oust Amin, said: "We estimate over 200 in this grave. I am sure of it. The hole is so deep."

Obonyo said some of the slain children appeared only three years old. He said the bodies were either naked or in civilian clothes. Some had their throats cut and others were stabbed in the chest, he said.

Atrocities began surfacing soon after Amin overthrew President Milton Obote and took power in 1971. Independent sources say more than 200,000 persons have been killed in the eight years. Reporters at Soroti, who have been covering Uganda since the start of Amin's rule, said they had not previously witnessed an example of such large-scale murder.

The massacre evidently occurred during the three weeks between April 11, when Kampala fell and provisional President Yusufu Lule was installed, and Friday, when this town of 15,000 fell to the Tanzanian forces without a fight.

Residents said Amin's soldiers and secret police, as it became clear that their reign of terror was ending, grew increasingly vengeful, disorganized and dangerous. The last of them fled on Thursday.

"It was only three weeks but we could only wait until the Tanzanians got here," said Firoz Khimji, 24. "It seemed like a year. Amin's people were looting and grabbing all the cars."

A Tanzanian column led by three tanks was reported only two kilometres beyond Soroti on Monday. Other Tanzanian forces were advancing in central and western Uganda in a drive to capture the northern third of the country still held by Amin's troops.

Refugees from the Arua area have said 10,000 Amin loyalists are preparing for the fight.

Soldiers and civilians in Soroti said they believe there has been a similar breakdown of law and order across vast areas of northern Uganda not yet under Tanzanian control. They said reports from travellers suggest that killing is widespread.

Waiting Game for Wayne

Gathering strength before beginning what doctors describe as "strictly experimental" treatment for the cancer that has reappeared in his body for the third time is actor John Wayne. Wayne, 71, spent a comfortable night and remains in stable condition, a UCLA Medical Centre spokesman said, but there was no indication when he would be strong enough to begin the treatments. Wayne, whose stomach was removed in January, 14 years after he lost a lung to cancer, was told last Friday that surgery last week revealed more cancer cells, and there was a likelihood the disease had spread throughout his body. Offered the chance to volunteer for experimental treatments, Wayne agreed to a program which is to include radiation, chemotherapy and oral drug treatment.

A 54-year-old Australian has ridden a bicycle 210 kilometres through Death Valley — one of the hottest places on earth. Cecil Cripps made his journey Tuesday in seven hours, 32 minutes and 13 seconds. He said he was in agony during the last 48 kilometres, ridden in temperatures of 32-to-38 C and was "very saddle sore" at the finish. Cripps also had to battle headwinds of 48 to 66 kilometres an hour which cut his average speed to 40 kmh. Manager Bill Emmerton said Cripps's time will be submitted to the Guinness Book of Records as the fastest bicyle ride through Death Valley by a man over 50.

Meanwhile, Dan Lowndes of Vancouver figures he is about 2,440,000 paces and three pairs of running shoes from home. The 19-year-old, who arrived in Winnipeg earlier this week, is "just about on schedule" in his attempt to break the cross-Canada jogging record for a teen-ager. Lowndes is hoping to complete the trip from Vancouver to St. John's in 90 days, 23 days less than the 1974 record set by Mark Kent, then 17, of Toronto. Running at about 10 kilometres an hour is a great way to see Canada, Lowndes said.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev Tuesday pinned the Order of the October Revolution on his son, Yuri, for his "contribution in the construction and exploitation" of a gas pipeline. The younger Brezhnev, 46, is first deputy minister for foreign trade.

In Salem, Ore., John and Greta Rideout have settled their last dispute, paving the way for a decree that made their divorce final. Rideout withdrew a request that his ex-wife share an $18,000 bill for lawyers' fees he incurred at his trial on a charge of raping her. The dispute had been the final obstacle to the divorce decree, signed Monday by Judge Albin Norblad of Marion County circuit court.

Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler has been released from Tufts-New England Medical Centre but is under orders to rest at home, hospital officials say. The frail, 84-year-old maestro was wheeled out of the hospital and lifted into a waiting car Tuesday after being held at the hospital for three days of observation. Fiedler was rushed to the medical centre Saturday night when he fainted briefly backstage after conducting the Pops at Symphony Hall.

Soviet chess grandmaster Boris Spassky was cool, collected and overwhelming as he took on 25 challengers simultaneously Wednesday at a downtown Montreal plaza. Onlookers burst into laughter as Spassky, who placed fifth in the recent Man and his World tournament here, stared in comic, wide-eyed disbelief when competitors made moves that would postpone defeat a little longer. When the dust had settled Spassky had won 22 games and drawn three. "He's one of the few gentlemen left in this game," said Earl Sweet, who lasted the longest against the 42-year-old grandmaster.

Sir William Stephenson, who headed an Allied intelligence network during the Second World War, will receive an honorary degree from the University of Winnipeg on May 27. Stephenson, a Winnipeg native, was knighted in 1945 for his war efforts, described in the best-selling book A Man Called Intrepid. A three-part television series, Intrepid, based on the book, concludes tonight.

And, finally, the trouble with Peter Snyman, who is trying to live with 24 deadly snakes near Johannesburg, South Africa, for 40 days and 40 nights, is that he's a warm human being. Now that a chilly autumn has settled on the Southern Hemisphere, the two dozen cold-blooded snakes sharing Snyman's small enclosure have taken to cuddling up to him for warmth. It makes sleeping a problem. The curator at the Hartebeespoort Snake Park in South Africa said Snyman is showing signs of mental fatigue and has become "extremely short-tempered."

Callaghan Support Unanimous

LONDON (Reuter) — James Callaghan received the unanimous support of the Labor party caucus today, and the former prime minister said he has no intention of retiring despite the party's defeat in last week's British general election.

Callaghan, 67, confirmed in his post by acclamation by the 268 Labor MPs elected in the election, told them he had read newspaper stories suggesting an imminent fight for over who would succeed him.

"There is no vacancy," he said.

Thorpe Feels a Chill In Second Day of Trial

LONDON (UPI) — Former Liberal Party leader Jeremy Thorpe, wearing his overcoat in the prisoner's dock, watched granite-faced today as his lawyer submitted legal arguments in his trial on charges he plotted to murder an alleged homosexual lover.

It was the second day of what has been billed as the "trial of the century." The morning was devoted to the defence submissions and the nine-man, three-woman jury was not present in the Old Bailey criminal courtroom.

Thorpe, 50, pleaded innocent Tuesday. If convicted, he could face up to life in prison although it was considered unlikely the government would make him serve the full sentence.

Shortly after the trial resumed today, Thorpe pulled a grey overcoat with a velvet collar over his charcoal suit. He also sat with his coat on Tuesday and his lawyer explained to the judge then that Thorpe felt a chill.

The judge, Justice Cantley, replied, "I thought it was much too hot, but if he is sitting in a draft and does not mind wearing an overcoat, I don't either."

The press benches, which had been jammed at the opening session, were noticeably depleted this morning.

At one point, Peter Bessell, the man expected to be the first prosecution witness, was brought into court and questioned by the judge about a newspaper story that mentioned him.

Bessell said the reporter had simply asked him if he drank as much tea as usual and he had replied yes.

The judge, who Tuesday issued a stern warning to journalists to avoid "interfering" with the witnesses, admonished Bessell to "avoid contacts with press" and "any interviews."

Election analysis

The question most voters will then be asking themselves when they go to the polls tomorrow is: Has the Social Credit government of Bill Bennett done such a bad job that it deserves to be thrown out?

It is, however, important that they also ask: Will the alternative — and the only alternative with a chance of forming the government is the NDP — be likely to do a better job of governing B.C. in the 1980s?

These are not easy questions to answer. Bill Bennett's Socreds have performed well in some areas and badly in others. Some Socred cabinet ministers have done excellently in their portfolios (Allan Williams and Rafe Mair are a couple who leap to mind), while others have not been an asset either to the government or to the province.

Similarly, the alternative, the NDP, has shown significant potential in some areas, but little in others. The party has apparently learned some lessons from its 1975 electoral defeat, but perhaps not all it should have.

Premier Bennett himself is his party's biggest asset. An admitted failure as leader of the opposition, he has grown tremendously since taking over the reins of office. He has proved to be an extremely competent administrator in an almost classical sense and has developed recognized abilities in the cut-and-thrust of political debate. He has demonstrated a great personal sense of honesty and integrity and has become respected across Canada for his contributions as a leader at federal-provincial conferences.

If the Socred cabinet were composed of 18 Bill Bennetts, there would need be no reservations in re-electing the party to a second term.

Regrettably, it is not. Although the cabinet has a few very strong ministers, it also has several who can be considered only dismal failures. One reason for this is the essential nature of today's Social Credit party. It is in fact not a single party with a single set of principles; it is rather a coalition of Liberals, Conservatives, and old-time, rural populist Socreds who joined forces in 1975 to get rid of the NDP government.

To keep the balance in the coalition, Bennett has had to appoint some cabinet ministers more on the basis of their political past than their competence. It is hoped that this would no longer be required if the government were re-elected.

An encouraging sign is the standard of new candidate that Bennett has recruited in many ridings. Looking just at the Greater Victoria area, it is obvious that the election of men like Brian Smith and Mike Young would certainly strengthen the existing cabinet.

The other great weakness the Socreds have displayed is a tendency to consider only the bottom line of the balance sheet in determining their policies. Especially in their first 18 months in office, they seemed either ignorant or uncaring about the resulting hardship as they raised taxes, raised fees, and tightened up social programs.

The cynics suggest that this attitude has changed in the past few months only because an election was in the wind. B.C. residents must hope, however, that their new policies stem not only from political considerations but also from a developing understanding that the bottom line is only one value, and not necessarily the one that should be dominant in every situation.

Their greatest strengths have been in government administration and financial and economic management. There is still room for improvement in the handling of financial matters, but steady progress is being made. A climate has been created in which business (Big Business in particular) is willing, almost eager, to expand and modernize its operations in the province. At the same time, the Socreds (aided by a couple of years of wage-and-price controls imposed by the federal Liberals) have been relatively successful in keeping the lid on the rising expectations of the average B.C. resident.

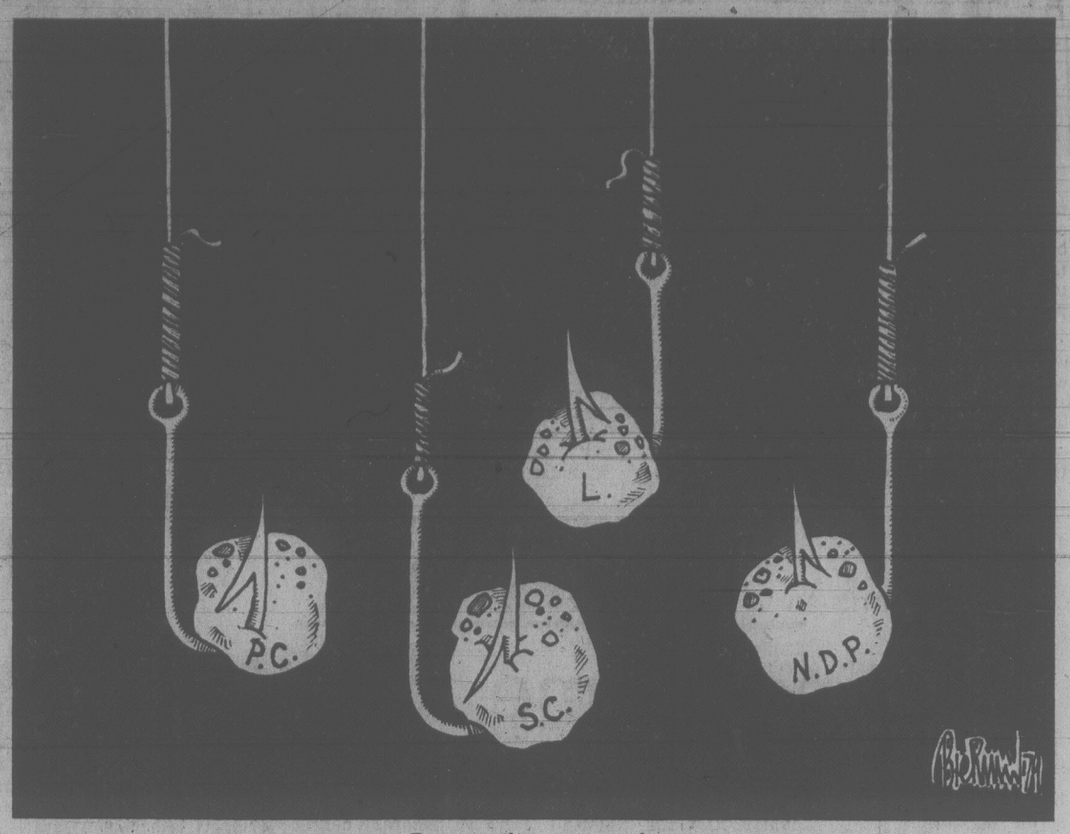
These two last achievements take on special importance in the light of the undoubtedly hard economic times expected in the next few years.

These areas of Socred strength must also be judged the greatest areas of NDP weakness. Although Barrett and the NDP have spent much time during this campaign emphasizing economic development issues, it is doubtful they could follow through on their ideas to produce better growth than the Socreds. A major reason for this must be the attitude of business to the NDP; the large corporations probably wouldn't give an NDP government much help in economic development.

At the same time the record of the former NDP government — huge wage increases, greatly expanded social programs — would automatically lead to raised expectations quite unjustified by the economic climate forecast for the early 1980s.

The NDP's greatest strengths lie in its social conscience, in its determination to equalize the standard of living across the province. It is a commendable goal, but given the party's weakness in economic affairs as well as world economic conditions that this province cannot avoid, it is difficult to see how the NDP could responsibly put such measure into effect.

On balance, the Socreds' strength in the economic area and the leadership of Bill Bennett must give them the edge. He deserves to govern for another term.



Bon appetit — once again.

An orange and a motor boat

As a political rally, it was a highly successful rock concert. Or, as a rock concert, it was a highly successful political rally. Or something like that.

The NDP's mammoth event at the Memorial Arena on Sunday evening was so different from any ordinary political happening that it is difficult to analyze it in normal political terms. To try to compare it with the Social Credit rally held in the arena five days earlier, for instance, is to try to compare an orange with a motor boat.

There are figures that can be compared, of course. Attendance — about 3,000 at the Socred rally, about 8,000 at the NDP one; length of speeches — 70 minutes for Premier Bill Bennett, about 15 minutes for NDP leader Dave Barrett.

Different goals

What cannot and should not be compared, however, is the essential atmosphere, even the essential goals of the two rallies.

To be sure, each party wanted to draw a large and enthusiastic crowd, to provide good footage for the television cameras, to give the impression of success and imminent victory.

But beyond that, one of the main goals of the NDP rally was to provide some fun for its supporters and workers. A couple of NDP organizers admitted privately that one of the party's goals was to show young people — many of whom are natural NDP voters — that politics was fun, that it wasn't boring and irrelevant.

To that end, a high proportion of the time at the Sunday rally was devoted to pure entertainment, especially entertainment designed for young people — rock groups, jazz groups, folk groups, singing songs, encouraging the audience to join in and clap and stamp, as well as cheer for the politicians.

The political speeches were kept to a minimum — a few minutes' introduction from former federal leader Tommy Douglas and the 15-minute address from Barrett. Some of the more serious political members in the crowd were disappointed — they would have preferred a longer speech by Barrett with specifics of NDP policy and perhaps a few words from each of the Lower Island candidates.

But the speech was not designed to be the high point of the rally. Barrett said nothing new or exciting at all.

The high point, rather, was Barrett's entrance to the blaring music of an NDP advertising jingle sung by pop singer Susan Jacks: "Dave Barrett and the NDP, the best choice for B.C./ Dave Barrett and the NDP, the best choice for you and me." Between the electronic amplification of the music and the cheering and applause from the crowd, the noise was numbing.

The wind-up to the rally was the collection of all politicians and all musicians on stage to join with the audience in singing This Land Is Your Land. It was terribly corny, it was hokey, but it was fun, and the audience found it fun.

The sense of fun was not present at the Socred rally, but then it was not designed for that purpose. To the Socreds, politics is a serious business, and the rally was run in a serious, business-like manner. The only entertainment was a brass band that played for an hour or so while the crowd was coming before the rally actually began. Most of the songs were from the '30s, '40s, and '50s (Roll Out the Barrel, marches by John Philip Sousa, Happy Days Are Here Again), in contrast to the NDP's entertainment which was almost exclusively from the 1970s.

Songs of the '30s

The only audience participation, aside from the roaring standing ovations for Bennett, was the singing of the national anthem. Otherwise virtually the only agenda item was the 70-minute speech by Bennett. There was no wind-up; the audience slipped away as Bennett finished.

So, comparing the two, the Socreds put together a very good orange. And the NDP piloted a very good motor boat. Or vice versa. Or something like that.

Tourism under Grace McCarthy: With an 85 cent dollar in Canada why would the Americans tour anywhere else?

The new hospital: Social Credit could not build a new hospital in Victoria for over 20 years. The NDP did the groundwork and after three years of Bill Bennett, they have finally broken the ground. I don't think that this item is one for any party to take any plaudits for.

McGeer? He subsidizes the private schools so we can turn the clock back and promote the old time elitism that is supposed to be passe in enlightened countries.

Curtis and St. Ann's academy? An empty gesture that would never have come to pass if it were not for an impending election. And wait until the cost estimates to remodel it show up, and good old Social Credit tells the local taxpayers that they have to pick up the tab.

Sam Bawlf and the Inner Harbor? It seems to me that this program was under way before big Sam ever hit Victoria. So far as the Crystal Gardens go, renovating it may or may not be a good idea. — W. A. Drummond, Duncan.

Real socialism

It is with great sadness I read the many letters to the editor pushing for socialism and state control of our province and our lives. No political party is perfect, everyone will agree. However, why don't all the socialist-minded people just take a look at all the countries which have or had socialist governments and just see for themselves what socialism will bring.

Just to name a few: Hitler's Germany (total dictatorship — state control and secret police). I don't think I need mention Russia at all. Sweden, although it escaped both world wars, is faced with unbelievable problems. Norway, where I was born, had a sales tax of 22 per cent on everything but food, and this tax was raised a short while ago to 30 per cent: This country has had a socialist government for almost 20 years, and the country is nearly broke in spite of the newfound North Sea oil.

A bottle of beer costs $6, gasoline $2.40 a gallon, a bottle of liquor between $18 and $25, a new compact car, such as a Honda or similar, $18,000. Very few people put in an honest day's work. They make the same amount of money whether they work hard or hardly at all, and, since most of them are employees of the state, they can't be fired. So, why worry?

I came to Canada to get away from all the evils of socialism. All I can say to all of you with socialist tendances: Take a good look at what socialism has done to other countries, and if what you see is what you want either go there or ruin our beautiful country slowly but surely. — Erik Hoel, 2639 Currie Road.

The most blatantly dishonest advertisement of the election has to be the Social Credit one with a table of comparative provincial tax rates. The table is a reprint from Page 48 of the budget speech but one line of the original table has been deleted for the advertisement, the line which shows medicare premiums.

The budget table shows premiums as "nil" in seven provinces and $90 single and $225 married per year in B.C." Alberta has lower premiums than B.C. and the 10th province, Ontario, slightly higher ones than B.C.

No representation

On the subject of election nonsense: When the B.C. election was announced, Dave Barrett was up in Juneau, outlining a plan to help the millionaires by extending a rail link to Alaska. His initial reaction was to announce that "... B.C. needs ... a declaration that its premier will fight for all the people, not just the millionaires." (Times, April 4). The feat of simultaneously serving the working people and those who live off them has never been matched in a real circus and is more remote than completing all the payments on a home mortgage.

His loyal opposition on the other hand, after 20 years of massive nationalization and state charity, has warned the voters that the NDP will make people wards of the state. Naturally both parties have to bring in more state intervention, in a vain attempt to resolve the growing contradictions of the wages, money profit system, that the private sector of class ownership cannot cope with.

The majority, those who must peddle their marketable skills to an owning class, will continue to have no representation in the legislature after polling day. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Avenue.

Irrational scheme

Your editorial The BCRIC Shares (May 2) must be rated a failure in logic and clarity of thought. On the one hand you state the cost "to mail out notices and annual reports to the possible two million owners of five free shares ... would be astronomical"; yet on the other hand you blithely state in defence of the scheme that the "five free shares will ... receive individual dividends from the corporation." How and at what cost will this dividend disbursement take place?

Further, to state as you do that critics of the scheme "are the same people who never vote, who take no interest in politics yet scream the loudest when something happens" — must surely be the non sequitur of the year.

In fact, the whole scheme is an ill-thought out, cynical ploy which will do little either psychologically or educationally to elevate the average citizen's awareness of economic realities. To give five shares away for nothing and allow the monied segment of the population to buy 5,000 shares of the assets of the people of British Columbia at "a 46 per cent discount from book value" must be the height of irrationality.

The money currently being expended upon this trip of cynical and misguided manipulation could be better spent upon a program of education in economics for all levels of our population.

The real tragedy, it would appear, is that few politicians and no political party seem to have the guts to damn the scheme for what it is — for fear of losing votes! — Peter Pollen, 1060 Yates Street.

Editor's Note: The BCRIC prospectus states: "Declaration of dividends will be advertised and dividends payable on common shares represented by bearer share certificates [the five free shares] will be paid to the bearer on presentation of such certificates to any dividend paying agent named in such advertisements."

How messed up?

My first reaction to the April 25 Editor's Notebook (Big Business Views the Provincial Election) was one of sheer panic. To think that our beautiful province could be plunged into economic stagnation by the indiscretion of its voters! If the big resource companies flee the province, just think of the pools of petroleum that would be left undiscovered, the mineral deposits undeveloped, the trees uncut and, most important of all, the people left unemployed.

And all because of an NDP policy "to ensure that the people receive a fair share of the resource revenue would lead to a substantial reduction in profits for the resource companies." Do these poor misguided souls not realize that the resource companies are the only ones capable of putting the people of this province to the task of developing their own natural wealth and for this benevolent service are entitled to their substantial profits.

Is it not enough that the labor unions want these companies to share their profits with the people who produce them? Not for the NDP! They also want them to share with the people who own the resources from which the profits are derived. Shame on you, Dave Barrett!

I finally consoled myself with the fact that the voters would surely remember the economic mess the NDP made when they voted them into power before and would not make the same mistake again. Heaven knows they were told about this mess enough times in the past three years.

And clean it up we did! Our current government tells us that, with their guiding hand, we have done such a good job that we can now look forward to all sorts of goodies from the public coffers if the Socreds are re-elected. And to think that this is all possible in spite of the fact that inflation, unemployment and business failures are all at a higher rate than when we started the clean-up job.

How I see it

We have been invited to judge the NDP's performance on four vital signs, or areas of economic activity in the province during their term of office, as compared with that of the Socred government, and this is how I read the charts:

☐ Job creation. The NDP may have created a lot of jobs but the vital question is how many were worthwhile and productive? In a period when, all over Canada, regardless of the political party in power, job opportunities declined, one can scarcely fairly charge it to Socred government policy here during their term.

☐ Mining Output. The NDP inherited a very healthy mining industry in the province, but real mines take years to develop and yield returns. So the NDP started up their own instant gold mine, the supertax, a high grading operation, reaped the profits and got out just ahead of the consequent slump, to leave for the Socreds to clean up.

☐ Real Income. Yes, with the tax money rolling in, we could afford the luxury of more jobs and better pay for less production. — for a while, that is — until the bill collector came around!

☐ Bankruptcies. They don't develop in a few weeks or months, so once again the chart tells the story. We are now being called on to pay for the former years of profligacy and bad business management. — C. d'E. Barker, 1565 Wilmot Place.

Highway mess

Our present provincial government shortchanges schools and hospitals, but look at the millions being wasted funnelling the so-called Island highway through the centre of Duncan when it could very easily have been routed around the west side of this built-up area.

With the present traffic lights and left turns and more to come it will soon be like going through Nanaimo.

Just another commercial drive, not a highway, which will be the curse of every Island motorist that becomes tangled in the bottleneck, for they are paying for this fiasco that will have to be done again at the cost of millions of dollars more of our money.

It's in the bag, Bill

After attending the Social Credit rally on May 1, I can positively assure people that truly amicable folks are still with us. Premier Bennett (the John Wayne of politics) mixed some japery with a lot of austerity and proved that politics do not necessarily have to be a bale of fallacious statements. Mr. Bennett, cast all doubts aside, for you have it all in the bag. — Barry Tateham, 216-535 Niagara Street.

Reasons to vote

It will be surprising if Bill Bennett's down-grading of democracy in B.C. does not meet rejection on May 10 for the following reasons:

☐ Delay of the legislature: When has any administration in memory avoided its essential public accounting, so as to escape almost entirely the full exposure of its policies to the opposition and to public gaze?

☐ Orders-in-council: Overuse of orders-in-council has given the executive an inordinate degree of power, a policy that has been challenged by every spokesman for democracy in this and other provinces for 150 years.

☐ Sale of assets: Matters of importance to the public are delayed or ignored, while the sellout of the province, both by private industry and by the government has gone on apace. Why should successful, helpful and imaginative sources of public service and revenue such as the bus lines, poultry business and freight car construction be closed or sold to non-Canadian interests merely to satisfy the premier's obsession that he cannot tolerate such operations, because he thinks they have to meet the 19th century concepts of his economic thinking?

☐ "Free shares" Frittering away of public assets is silly, in the minds of a great many citizens, not at all "revolutionary" as the premier thinks. Democracy would require that all share alike in the giveaway, but this plan allows opportunity for the rich to get richer at low-valued rates.

When Bennett sold Kelowna farmland to the CPR for a shopping centre, thus helping him to become a millionaire, was society helped? Surely we must become surfeited with the immoral economic nonsense we continue to have thrust upon us. The principle of democracy, full life for all, and not just the fortunate ones, needs extension everywhere. — Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

Don't be suckered

I hope the vital issues of jobs and wages is not overlooked in the emotional rhetoric, campaign promises and the handouts of election goodies in the B.C. election campaign.

On jobs, statistics show that the average unemployment rate under the NDP was 7.1 per cent compared to 8.5 per cent under the Social Credit party.

The number of employed persons during the NDP administration increased by 140,000 compared with 115,000 under the present regime.

Last fall, even the Socreds' best friend, the Conference Board of Canada, predicted that the unemployment rate would rise this year to 8.3 per cent. The recent Social Credit budget has completely ignored this economic factor as there is nothing in it to counter this unemployment increase. There are no job-creating measures in the budget.

In wages, statistics prove without doubt that wage increases have been running below the inflation rate, largely due to the federal government's wage control program. Workers, therefore, have been losing money as big business have been reaping massive profits.

Statistics also show that in 1975, when the NDP was in power, the average tax paid by workers to the provincial treasury was $1,000. In 1977, under the Social Credit government, it was $1,500.

The Socreds have promised tax cuts as an election gimmick. They did so, too, in 1975 but once in power they raised the sales tax to seven per cent along with other increases. Shall we be suckers again by believing them? — Faith Lort, 4932 Wesley Road.

More bureaucracy

I have always doubted the sanity of any government which creates a new bureaucracy to cut bureaucratic red tape. The Social Credit government falls under this category. While understanding that the wheels of government bureaucracy turn slowly at best, the recently created ministry of deregulation has managed to further slow things down unnecessarily.

In the summer of 1978, the Alma Mater Society of the University of Victoria commissioned a summer project to study and advise on accessibility for the physically disabled at the university. It was a pilot study, the first of its kind in B.C. Many of its recommendations were based on proposed amendments to the B.C. Building Code, originally put forth by the New Democratic Party in 1974. It has since taken five years for this legislation to go through. The most important amendment involved calls simply for the provision of a "barrier-free environment," a provision which is certainly not disadvantageous to anyone — neither the physically disabled, the elderly, pregnant women and harried parents, nor the naturally accident prone. The legislation was actually signed at one point by the then minister of municipal affairs, Hugh Curtis. However, this neatly coincided with a cabinet shuffle, and the birth of Mr. Bawlf's ministry of deregulation, into whose depths the amendment, along with the UVic study, sunk for a considerable number of weeks. There is still no sign of either at this time.

William Vander Zalm, now minister of municipal affairs, claims that the legislation is "far-reaching" and "progressive." I agree. But he cannot justify the long delay involved. As for the UVic study, Mr. Vander Zalm's comment was "who cares . . .?" — Marla Nickerson, President, Alma Mater Society, University of Victoria.

On monopolies

Re: the letter signed Alf Flett about ICBC rates, etc. What Flett does not mention is that for years before the NDP came to power the late W.A.C. Bennett threatened to bring in legislation to form a Crown insurance company. Unfortunately or otherwise, it remained for the NDP to start ICBC. The only reprehensible thing that I can see about ICBC is that it should make a handsome profit that would remain in the province and supply funds for various good works.

It was a monopoly situation before the Socreds emasculated it. I don't know where Flett proposes the line should be drawn. B.C. Tel is a monopoly, it turns handsome profits and they all leave the country. B.C. Hydro, well, the less said about that the better.

However, it too is a monopoly and should make profits just as the old B.C. Electric did. As long as they are allowed to borrow literally without control all they will do is contribute to the over-all provincial deficit! We need some business-like administration all right but 26 years of Social Credit have never been able to provide it! — J. R. MacDonald, Vancouver.

Straight Tory ticket

In the provincial election, the idea that a vote for the Conservatives is a vote for the NDP is nonsense, as well as negative thinking. Certainly, the Conservatives will take votes from the Socreds, but will they not also be taking votes from the NDP?

The electors are entitled to have a free choice of more than two parties. There are a large number of people who are disillusioned with the Socreds, but they don't want the NDP back in power again. The Conservatives offer a grand opportunity to people who are fed up with big bureaucracy, big government, big business and big multinational corporations on the one hand, and big labor and big unions on the other. The Conservatives have a capable and courageous leader in Vic Stephens who has an excellent team of candidates and a positive policy, especially for small businessmen and people on fixed incomes.

On the federal scene, the Conservatives also have a capable and courageous leader. Joe Clark may not have the flamboyance of Trudeau, but at least he is a man of honesty and integrity. He doesn't go in for clowning or snide remarks, but he gives it straight from the shoulder. Trudeau apart, this country has had enough of the Liberal party for the past 50 years, a party of proven ineptitude and whose leaders from Mackenzie King onwards have been a poor lot! — Richard D. Corrance, 710 Cormorant Street.

Election energy

How energy is to be obtained in B.C. in the future must surely be an important issue in the election campaigns, and evidence shows quite a difference in the approaches the two major B.C. parties take towards it.

First, Social Credit plans to sacrifice prime agricultural land in the Peace River valley for the Site C dam. They apparently consider this to be a worthwhile tradeoff. The NDP does not.

Secondly, concerning nuclear power, the Three-Mile accident has had the effect of alarming Rafe Mair and leading Bill Bennett to say that nuclear power does not have to be considered for some time. However in November, Robert Bonner, the Socred-appointed head of B.C. Hydro, said that "nuclear power will be a part of our future whether we like it or not. Hydro will have to start construction of a nuclear power plant within 10 years." The NDP has been on record for some time now as opposing nuclear power and uranium mining.

If the Socreds are willing to play for high ecological stakes in their pursuit of energy, then they should not be surprised at losing the coming election. — Peter Kerr, 538 Swanwick Road.

Trudeau's jet dinner-tray gaffe

BY ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

DRUMMONDVILLE, Que. — On April 23rd, when the Liberal campaign jet took off from Ottawa to Winnipeg on the way to Cranbrook, B.C. three reporters were invited to come to the front of the plane and dine with the prime minister.

On what went on in the next several hours, both Liberal and Conservative strategists agree. The biggest single mistake of the election campaign so far has been made not by the accident-prone Joe Clark, as fully expected, but by the cool and cerebral Pierre Trudeau.

By musing out loud that he might attempt to stay in power even though winning fewer seats than the Tories on May 22, he has given the surprised and delighted Clark his best weapon of the campaign, a weapon he uses every day in every speech. If it turns out that Trudeau loses this election, he very probably lost it seven miles high while his jet sped westward that night.

The idea of inviting a few chosen journalists to dine with the PM was the new idea of Arnie Patterson, the new Trudeau press chief. He is a wealthy radio station operator from Nova Scotia who likes to talk and josh it up with the boys.

He feels one of Trudeau's problems is that he has been too aloof and inaccessible and he set out immediately on taking over the job to expose his prime property to the scrutiny of pencils and microphones.

On this fateful night Patterson selected Mark Phillips, the rising young CBC reporter, Mary Janigan of the Toronto Star and Jeffrey Simpson of the Globe and Mail. Simpson, under the impression that such a cosy arrangement would be off the record, refused to compromise himself and declined the invitation.

The dinner, which took up about two-thirds of the flight, was uneventful except for one passage. To a Phillips question regarding the possibilities of a minority position by either party come May 22, Trudeau said he didn't know whether this was "on or off the record" but then proceeded to reply — indicating by that he didn't care which.

What he said was that he would be inclined to stay in power even if he won a few seats less than Clark.

There's nothing wrong with that. Constitutionally he has the full right to attempt to seek the confidence of the Commons. Mackenzie King successfully bluffed his way through the celebrated Lord Byng crisis of 1925 and British parliamentary history is full of such precedents.

The foolishness, of course, was in saying what he might have been thinking — in the middle of campaign fought mainly on the perceived Trudeau arrogance. Phillips, like a good reporter, filed his report as soon as the plane touched down. So did Janigan. Under the pool arrangements in such situations, they briefed the other reporters on the Trudeau plane as to what had happened.

Simpson, mortified at having missed a beat, registered a complaint with the Trudeau people for not making the ground rules clear. (A RadioCanada reporter, who didn't bother to file a story on the Trudeau meanderings, was yanked off the assignment.)

The result of the dining indiscretion is that Clark has gratefully accepted the free ammunition in painting a picture of a prime minister who is above the rules. He tells audiences how the Right Honorable Louis St. Laurent, "an honorable man," in 1957 technically could have tried to carry on in the Commons, but turned over the reins to the Conservatives. And the Right Honorable John Diefenbaker, "an honorable man," in 1963 in the same circumstances handed over the government to Lester Pearson.

Pierre Trudeau, per force, is not an honorable man. "For 11 years he has ignored your views and now he says he's going to ignore your votes." It's convincing stuff in a Tory campaign that badly needs some bite and Clark gets great response with it.

Even the Liberal strategists admit it was a terribly damaging mistake. It reinforced voter perception of two Trudeau weaknesses: his lofty academic habit of doing his thinking out loud; and his supposed arrogance.

The goof — which in the public mind surpasses any of Clark's goofs so far — makes it more difficult to pull off the Liberal stretch strategy of hammering at the contrast in the two leaders.

Trudeau started off calling Clark a "servant" of the provincial premiers, proceeded to "head-waiter" and now calls him a "tumble-weed." The final Liberal drive is to bang away more and more at Clark's credibility — but Clark has been handed the best single issue so far.

Those seven-mile-high cosy dinners with the press? Oh yes. They've been cancelled. The PM dines in peace, contemplating the left-over academic weakness of thinking out loud.

Who should pay for shah's ships?

THE WASHINGTON POST
An Editorial

Four destroyers of very advanced design are currently under construction, in a Mississippi shipyard, for the shah of Iran. But the shah won't be needing them. He's gone out of the arms business, and his successors have cancelled the order. What happens to the ships? They are about half-completed; the first two of them are scheduled to be launched later this year. The Department of Defence says the U.S. navy needs them. This suggestion is currently drawing a chorus of boos and hisses from people in Congress, who retort that the U.S. taxpayer has no obligation to bail out the shah.

Unfortunately, it's not quite as simple as that. Foreign governments are not permitted to buy directly from U.S. arms manufacturers. The shah ordered the ships from the U.S. government, which in turn signed a contract with Litton Industries to build them. Litton is working for the U.S. Navy. The Iranian government's past deposits in its U.S. arms fund are large enough to cover the work already done on the ships. There would be no financial loss to Litton or to the Navy if work were suddenly stopped. But what does one do with four half-finished destroyers? They are too large to plant philodendron in.

If the United States stopped construction and charged all the costs so far — something over a half a billion dollars — to Iran, it would certainly sour relations with the new revolutionary government. It needs the money — just as, conversely, the United States needs Iranian oil.

These destroyers were the extreme example of all that was wrong with the uncontrolled and uncontrollable sales of U.S. arms to Iran. The Iranians did not begin to have the depth of technical capacities to man them. The U.S. government was supposed to train the crews, but that part of the bargain was lagging badly. These ships in the shah's hands would have been a genuine menace.

The ships are going to be completed, and the only place for them is in the U.S. navy. Two of them can be substituted for similar ships already on the navy's future program. To keep them under the U.S. flag will cost $1.3 billion over the next couple of years. That's a lot of money, but it's not a bad price for getting out of the Iranian arms deal. You could say that the money is going, not for arms, but rather for arms control.

CRTC Orders CBC Report

The CBC has been ordered to appear June 19 before the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to discuss progress toward a new TV broadcasting station in Victoria.

At a hearing in the fall, the CBC told the commission budget restraints had caused the indefinite postponement of the new CBUVT signal. Then the corporation said its long-term spending priorities should be known by June, 1979.

The CRTC is anxious to have the new station established and helping to provide a distinctive CBC service throughout Vancouver Island.

Meanwhile, the commission renewed the licence of CBUVT for one year from April 1, 1979, to give time to resolve its plans for Victoria and Vancouver Island.

It is a condition of licence that the station may not broadcast on full power, using network material, until it is able to provide at least seven hours, 10 minutes of local programming per week. The station is not yet on the air.

Persons wishing to file an intervention opposing, supporting or commenting on the matter should outline the facts and grounds on which it is based, and send them to the CRTC by May 30. It should also be stated whether the intervener will attend the hearing at the Sheraton Landmark Hotel, Vancouver.

Spit Park Deal Disappoints

Buying less than one-twentieth of Sidney Island for parkland is a disappointing pre-election move by the provincial government, said a spokesman for a group urging full public ownership of the island.

George Lohrmann, chairman of the Sidney Island Committee, was commenting on a move announced Tuesday by Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot, who said it had been agreed to add 105 acres to Sidney Spit marine park at a cost of $300,000, half provided by the Devonian Society.

Lohrmann said that rate, which works out to about $3,000 an acre, represents more than twice the per-acre value if the whole 1,800-acre island were sold. The island would cost more than $5 million at $3,000 an acre.

Sidney Island had been offered by owner Jack Todd for $3 million, which the government said was too much.

"We're very disappointed," Lohrmann said. "We don't think they paid a very good price."

The committee ran an advertisement today urging the public to support candidates in the election who have pledged to negotiate a fair price to buy the whole island for public use, and the party which will give the Sidney Island purchase high priority.

"This is our last shot before the provincial elections," Lohrmann said, noting that most candidates say they favor the purchase of the island. With Tuesday's purchase, he wondered whether Saanich and the Islands MLA and Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis now considers his part done.

The committee will not relax its efforts and after the election will make immediate representations to new MLAs and the new minister of lands, Lohrmann said.

He hoped something good will come out of rezoning in the Gulf Islands now being worked out by the Islands Trust.

The committee also is glad that Todd dropped the condition that he be allowed to develop the rest of the island after selling 105 acres as parkland.

The Guardian Pays for Libel

LONDON (Reuter) — Uganda's former president Milton Obote accepted substantial damages Tuesday in settlement of a libel suit against The Guardian newspaper over an article implying he had ordered the murder of Idi Amin, the man who overthrew him. The July, 1976, article in the British daily said that during the military coup in 1971, Obote had telephoned to Uganda instructions that Amin be "disposed of." The newspaper agreed to pay undisclosed damages.

TV Rapped for Missing Discoveries

Speaking to Victoria Electric Club, the University of Victoria radio astronomer said during the spring she tried to find out a number of times when satellite transmissions would be telecast.

At the same time she found it hard to get on the mailing list of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasedena, Calif., mission control for the Voyager space craft, such was the demand for information aroused by the Jupiter program.

She visited JPL in December and has since collected a series of color slides taken by Voyagers as they passed near the planet and its moons.

Gower showed Voyager pictures to illustrate her talk to the electric club, including a description of the space vehicle displayed at JPL which has sent back the most detailed photographs of Jupiter and its moons yet seen by scientists.

Io is the strangest of the moons, she said, with little atmosphere and a surface consisting mainly of sodium and sulphur. There is no evidence of oxygen but time lapse photos show active volcanoes and the possibility of dried salt flats and lava flows.

It was a real surprise to astronomers to find Jupiter is circled by a ring and interesting to observe what appears to be lightning bolts flashing among its heavy cloud formations.

Voyagers I and II are heading for Saturn in 1986, and will look at its big moon, Titan, then move on to Uranus.

Meanwhile, Gower said, scientists will be following closely as a new spacecraft, Galileo, goes into orbit around Jupiter in 1982, passing each moon and exploring inner and outer space surrounding these bodies.

Sneak Thief Gets $400

City police are looking for a sneak thief who made off with a cash box containing about $400 from the Helms Inn, 668 Superior, Tuesday night.

A police spokesman said the night clerk at the Inn caught a glimpse of the thief as he fled at about 8:45 p.m.

Non-Smoker Day May 31

May 31 has been designated Non-Smokers' Day in B.C. by Health Minister Bob McClelland who quit smoking two years ago.

The minister said smoking is an example of self-imposed risk that can produce a serious health problem which often proves fatal.

He said he receives a flood of letters every month from people complaining about air pollution from cigarette smoke.

"Non-smokers are becoming increasingly agitated by the imposition of smoke pollution in the air they breath."

They are upset because medical evidence shows the smoke from a burning end of a cigarette is five times more noxious than the smoke inhaled by the person doing the smoking.

Smokers who want help quitting can write to the health ministry.

"If you persist in smoking, at least be considerate of those around you who might be offended by your habit," the minister said.

Festival Finale Gets Cheering Full House

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Except for a handful of seats in the upper balcony, the McPherson Playhouse was full Monday for the wind-up concert of the two-and-a-half week long Greater Victoria Music Festival.

It was an enthusiastic crowd that at times shouted for encores. None were given, however, in keeping with the committee's wish to keep the affair to a two-hour maximum length.

All the way from teen-aged trumpeter Kathy Bowles' fanfare of The Queen and O Canada, saluting the entrance of Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving and party, to the concluding colorful and brilliantly executed Veselka Ukrainian-Canadian ensemble's performance of a Hopak, the audience was warmly responsive.

The McPherson Playhouse Foundation's Award for the most distinguished performance was made by new president, John Goult. This is the second year of the award and it was split between bassoonist Janet Underhill and tenor Richard Margison.

SELECTION.QUALITY AND VALUE

Jack Davis 'Better than NDP'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

NORTH VANCOUVER — There is a great army of free enterprise voters in the riding of North Vancouver-Seymour who are going to vote for Social Credit candidate Jack Davis, although they are a little bit embarrassed about it all.

They are weighing his conviction for fraud against the threat of a dynamic NDP campaign being waged by Joy Langan, a vice-president of the B.C. Federation of Labor and a spokesperson for women's rights.

Being squeezed out in the middle is provincial Liberal leader Jev Tothill, whose support is fading in the showdown between the two major parties.

DAVIS

TOTHILL

Desmond Nex, the manager of a service station in the comfortable community of Dollarton, says the talk in his area is all in favor of Davis.

"We were surprised when he decided to run again — quite a bit surprised — but now it has become a straight party fight. The NDP is running a strong campaign and it's either them or Social Credit. People will be voting the party rather than the individual."

Shipyard executive Gordon Hutchison agrees.

"We didn't expect Davis would run again but the issue was settled when he got the nomination. This doesn't mean people have forgiven him exactly, although many feel the punishment was very severe for a nickel-and-dime offence. The question now is simply Davis or the NDP."

Davis, a former federal fisheries minister and environment minister had to resign as provincial minister of transport and as MLA because he was convicted of exchanging government-paid first-class airline tickets for coach class fares and pocketing the difference.

His defence was that he used the cash to pay other expenses incurred as an MLA, an argument which was not effective in court but has had a minor effect on the hustings.

It is never mentioned by the other candidates. It has never come up at an all-candidates meeting.

But the voters talk about the fraud conviction behind his back and he sometimes meets it face-to-face on the doorstep.

Davis talks candidly about its effect on his campaign.

"Only about one in 50 mention it to me. Many people remember it, of course, but they seem to regard it as something from the past.

"If they ask me about it, I explain the circumstances. They seem satisfied with my answers. But I can't know what people are thinking about it."

In the community it is heatedly discussed and voter opinion is split, usually along party lines.

"We have some pretty lively arguments in our cabs," one taxi driver related.

"Most of the drivers support the NDP, I guess, while most of our customers are free enterprise types.

"I told one man I thought Davis had a lot of gall running again after his conviction. He said the man had already paid for his mistake by losing his position in the cabinet. We didn't agree and we talked about something else."

There was no evidence in the riding of any vote of sympathy for Davis as a man who had already suffered more than enough. On the other hand, most free enterprise voters seemed willing to forgive him if for no other reason than to keep out the NDP.

They might have preferred another candidate. But Davis got a tremendous vote of vindication at the riding nominating convention when, running against a local alderman and a former Alberta Socred cabinet minister, Davis won the nomination on the first ballot with 80 per cent of the vote. He also got a standing ovation.

That set the stage for the battle against the NDP.

North Vancouver-Seymour is an armed camp. The NDP support is almost entirely in the lower levels while the free enterprise vote is in the newer housing developments at higher elevations.

Anyone making a quick visit to the riding could come to the wrong conclusion. The main roads go through the lower areas and there are NDP signs everywhere. Up in the hills, however, where the bulk of the population lives, the few signs in evidence are for Davis.

The riding covers the eastern third of the north shore, from the commercial centre of North Vancouver City to Deep Cove.

It also runs from Burrard Inlet up into the mountains.

The first thing one notices about the riding is that the waterfront is not pretty at all. It is totally industrialized. There is only one area in 11 miles of foreshore where the public has access and that is a 66-foot strip — for a yacht club.

The first houses were constructed near the water and now are old. They are often held for investment purposes for eventual commercial or industrial projects and in the meantime are being rented.

Party headquarters typify the two camps. The NDP headquarters is so close to the waterfront you could throw a stone and hear a splash. The other parties have their headquarters in the comfortable uplands.

There are four candidates:

Jack Davis, Social Credit: Now 62, he was a Liberal member of Parliament from 1962 until he was defeated by the Tories in 1974. He went into the provincial field as a Socred in 1975 and won in his first try for provincial office.

He hopes to play a strong role in B.C. Hydro after the election, retaining a lively interest in energy questions. He also retains an interest in transportation.

Does this mean a return to the provincial cabinet?

"It would be presumptuous of me to comment on that; it's up to the premier," Davis says. But he has no doubts he will be re-elected as MLA.

Joy Langan, NDP: She is 36, single, well-prepared for the election battle and a energetic worker. She was the first woman in Western Canada to be accepted as a printer (at Pacific Press) and has used the five months of the current labor dispute there to campaign full-time for the election.

Her interests range from specific proposals on bus transportation to day care and measures to battle inflation, especially the rising price of food.

She has more than 100 campaign workers and hundreds of signs. But she has no illusions.

"We are running very well in some areas but it is tough in others. We could make it interesting."

Jev Tothill, Liberal leader: He has the best slogan in the campaign: "Elect a leader." The 50-year-old teacher (on leave of absence) argues that as party leader he will get to speak on every major issue and can have the same clout for his constituents as if he were a cabinent minister.

That, and the free-time election broadcasts, is about all he has going for him.

He became leader only two months ago and his late start plus the fact the party has no money at all for the provincial campaign means he can make only a token effort at best.

But it is worse than that because Liberal manpower is so low he won't even be able to complete a canvass of the riding before election day. He is doing most of the work himself, and wins credit from voters for his courage if nothing else.

Joy Gilmore, Progressive Conservative: She is 31, single, and a supporter of party leader Vic Stephens. She worked for him as legal secretary in his Vancouver law office and was a major organizer when he won the Tory provincial leadership at a Kelowna convention.

Her brief canvass shows 70 per cent of the voters undecided, which is code for only 30 per cent even wished her luck.

Many voters are not aware there is a Conservative candidate.

In fact there is a considerable amount of confusion in the riding about who is running where and for what.

To begin with a former well-known Liberal is the Social Credit candidate running against the provincial Liberal leader. Many voters, including some Liberal supporters, name Gordon Gibson as the provincial leader.

Gibson was, but he resigned to run in the same area federally and he already has his signs up, adding to the bewilderment.

B.C. '79

The confusion will end at the polling booth, however, with most voters looking either for the Socred candidate or the NDP candidate.

The riding has a colorful past. It was held by Barry Clark of the Liberals from 1969 to 1972. Then it was captured (in a split vote) by Colin Gabelmann of the NDP.

Davis won the riding for Social Credit in 1975.

The 1972 result was interesting in that is shows what can happen in a four-way split. Gabelmann of the NDP won with only about 33 per cent of the vote. The provincial Tory leader, Derril Warren, came second with 26 per cent, closely followed by the Liberals and Social Credit.

In 1975 Davis beat Gabelmann handily. The result was:

Socreds, 14,359
NDP, 9,583
Liberal, 2,091
Tory, 914

The NDP thinks it can be closer this time but the collapse of vote for the Liberals and Tories in the riding gives Davis an edge, despite the invisible issue of his past.

It is significant that Gabelmann decided to contest a different riding for the NDP this time around.

BCR Not a Debt Bennett Claims

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett rejected Tuesday a recommendation by Auditor-General Erma Morrison that the province assume the $700 million debt incurred on its behalf by the British Columbia Railway.

Mrs. Morrison, in her first annual report to the legislature in March, said the province should acknowledge its obligations and state outright that the $700 million is a direct debt and not a contingent liability.

Bennett said there is no need to do so because the government will pay it off through an annual subsidy to the railway as part of Social Credit's long-promised transportation policy.

The premier, speaking on a CBC radio program in his last open-line appearance before Thursday's provincial election, said the $700 million debt is not a problem "if you take it into the transportation policy."

"It won't be a problem if you have a government which will address itself to it."

He said the solution is to provide a subsidy in the same manner as the taxpayers do to the B.C. Ferry Corp. and for provincial highways.

"Ferries are always going to run at a loss and we pay $50 million out of the B.C. treasury to subsidize fares," Bennett said.

"We've never asked the highways to make a profit. We build our highways out of current revenue and pay for their maintenance."

Bennett, told that Gary Lauk, former economic development minister, would recommend that the NDP list the liability as a direct debt, replied "you don't need it. It's just like the debt of the ferries and highways."

"You don't need a juggling of the books. What you need is a proper transportation policy."

Earlier in the program, Bennett said he had not yet applied for his five free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. because he intends to buy extra shares and does not want to lose interest on the money he will be paying out for the shares.

The maximum amount he can purchase is 5,000 shares for a total value of $30,000.

Bennett said that contrary to a recent poll the shares are an election issue and he repeated his suggestion that an NDP government would put an end to the distribution. NDP Leader Dave Barrett has said the government has spent too much of the budgeted $15 million to stop the scheme.

Bennett said Barrett has to stop the giveaway "if he stays with his philosophy of government ownership."

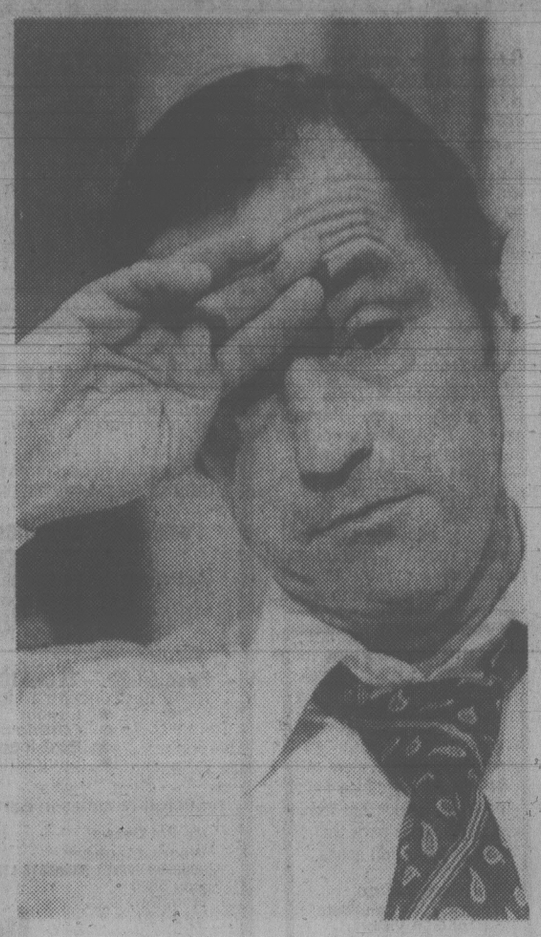
The premier said the giveaway is important to him because it is part of the Social Credit government's planning "to reverse the trend of both government ownership and merger and take over of ownership in the private sector."

Bennett said, however, the government's highly successful natural gas marketing agency, the B.C. Petroleum Corp., had not been included in the list of government-owned companies being returned to the private sector because it is "merely a tax-collecting agency."

Barrett has been saying that the corporation, set up by the previous NDP government, provides the province with more revenue than does liquor.

Bennett said he would not have voted for the corporation had he been in the legislature when it was set up, and that Barrett had intended to use it to take over gas stations and the petroleum industry.

The corporation is the sole marketing agency for natural gas in the province.



Last stretch on campaign for Bennett

Double Standard Charged

BURNABY (CP) — The New Democratic Party has a double standard on nuclear power and is hiding its true socialist nature, Premier Bennett said Tuesday.

Bennett said the NDP government had approved a uranium exploration permit in April, 1974, and this was an example of the "double standard and doubletalk of the NDP."

The charge was similar to one made in Penticton by Environment Minister Jim Hewitt.

NDP leader Dave Barrett has said during the campaign for Thursday's provincial election that an NDP government would not permit uranium exploration or mining in B.C. and would not use nuclear energy for power generation.

Bennett said there will be no nuclear power because it is not necessary, and a moratorium has been imposed on uranium mining and exploration pending a study now under way.

Barrett Pledge for Shipyard Work

Barrett . . . now a little greyer

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — New Democrat leader Dave Barrett told about 400 shipyard workers what they wanted to hear Tuesday — an NDP provincial government would encourage the industry.

Barrett reiterated his commitment to a policy of shipping goods from B.C. in ships built in the province.

"The government of B.C. should keep shipyards busy," he said during a lunch-time visit to Burrard Shipyard and Marine Ways Ltd. "It is a national disgrace that Canada does not have a merchant marine."

Noting that last week, Seaboard Shipping took possession of a Norwegian-built freighter to carry lumber between Vancouver and Japan, he said that he "has nothing against Norwegians, but I think that ship should have been built in B.C. — we have the skills, technology and ability."

He said Canada should be able to do the same as the U.S. and Brazil which require that a fixed percentage of their goods be shipped in vessels owned in their countries and manned by their nationals.

"We can start in B.C. with coal," he said, repeating a promise made earlier in the campaign that the NDP would finance a shipbuilding program with extra coal royalties, dovetailing it into a policy that 35 per cent of B.C. coal exports must be transported in ships built in B.C. and manned by B.C. crews.

He then toured the yard, which employs about 700 workers, noting that his father-in-law had worked there for years as a pipefitter.

During the brief tour, Barrett asked company general manager T.K. Duncan where the yard's steel comes from.

Told it comes from the U.S. and Japan, Barrett asked if it could be produced in a small steel mill in B.C. — one of his campaign promises.

Duncan said he didn't think so, because the steel needed requires specialized techniques.

Barrett also ran into some friendly opponents during his visit.

As he walked to the shipyard from the SeaBus, Bill Nichol, provincial Progressive Conservative candidate in North Vancouver-Capilano, ran up to shake Barrett's hand, joking that he wished he could break the arm instead.

When the NDP leader emerged from the yard, Nichol was waiting, this time asking Barrett to autograph a book, which he did.

Barrett also met a representative of the Rhinoceros Party, Richard Schaller, who calls himself Rich The Troll.

Abortion Stand Becomes Issue

SURREY (CP) — A pamphlet being circulated by an anti-abortion group says Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm is one of two candidates in the Surrey riding who will work towards "stopping abortion in British Columbia."

The pamphlet being circulated by the Coalition for Life says Vander Zalm and his Progressive Conservative opponent, Brian Westwood, are also committed to stopping funding for any agency that counsels women to have abortions or engages in referrals.

"I am a pro-lifer, I am against abortions," Vander Zalm said in an interview. "With me, it's a religious conviction."

The minister, a Catholic who served as human resources minister until last December, said he has worked against funding for groups involved in abortion referrals. He named the Planned Parenthood organization as an example of a group that was deprived of funding because of its work.

The Coalition for Life claims that 30 abortions are performed for every 100 live births in B.C.

Patient Deaths, Cutback Links 'Pure Nonsense'

B.C. '79

Health Minister Bob McClelland Tuesday dismissed as "pure nonsense . . . a political act" a written commentary by a Burnaby physician that health funding cutbacks have led to an increase of unrecognized deaths in B.C. hospitals.

The editorial in the current issue of the B.C. Medical Journal written by Dr. J.A. Pacey says increased hospital patient-care problems including unrecognized deaths are occurring as a result of staffing cutbacks precipitated by the restrictions placed on hospital budgets.

"Frankly I find this doctor is being irresponsible if he knows of deaths like that and can only write editorials about them," McClelland said.

The minister said any responsible doctor who could document such incidents would demand inquiries and bring them to the attention of his ministry.

"No one has ever come to my office and laid out facts of deaths like that," he said.

If any physician presented facts on increased hospital deaths before the ministry, there would be an immediate investigation, the minister said.

Consequently McClelland said he believes Dr. Pacey's motives to be political.

The charge is pure nonsense, he said. Only a week ago, the president of the B.C. Health Association said publicly he looked at all the hospital budgets and felt all would be able to keep up the standards of quality and quantity of hospital care, McClelland said.

And the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. recently provided the ministry with statistics that show B.C has the highest ratio of nurses to population in Canada.

In his commentary, Pacey, who is also on the board of directors of the B.C. Medical Association, writes that budget restraints have resulted in "severe functional problems which have reduced confidence in patient safety.

"Administrators have reduced nursing budgets to the danger level."

Pacey claims that in many hospitals "nurses are so thinly sprinkled that they find it impossible to keep track of patients under their care.

"More commonly now, incidents of undetected oliguria (restricted urine flow), unrecognized death and other problems are noted," he writes.

He said night shifts are extremely poorly staffed and reliable patients complain of long delays for simple nursing services.

Pacey encourages the BCMA and the nurses association to examine the problem at each hospital and pressure the government to improve the standard of safety for hospital patients by insisting on safe nursing levels.

Promises Big and Small Mark Election Trail

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

One of those parties out there on the hustings is going to form the government after Thursday's election.

So the Times has compiled a list of goodies the electorate has been promised by the party leaders over the 38-day campaign.

Most were issued by the NDP, while the Socreds mainly stuck with the goodies pledged in the April 2 budget.

LIBERALS

With only five candidates running, the Liberals under Jev Tothill cannot form the government.

But Tothill is opposed to the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. share giveaway, saying citizens should be paid a regular resource dividend from the sale of non-renewable resources.

CONSERVATIVES

Tory leader Vic Stephens whose chances of forming the government are only mathematically better than Tothill's also is opposed to the share giveaway.

He would stop it if economically feasible.

His main platform is to cut the province's $4.5 billion budget by $1 billion. He would end sales tax and school property tax and also wipe out the homeowner's grant.

NDP

Laader Dave Barrett has said one of the first bills the NDP would introduce would be one to block foreign ownership of land in B.C.

On resources, the NDP would get tough with oil companies.

Barrett say he would freeze gas and heating fuel prices.

He says B.C. should press for much higher prices for exported natural gas and that Canada should join OPEC.

He promised a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island.

If feasible, the NDP would establish a minor petro-chemical industry at Powell River in conjunction with the gas pipeline to the Island.

Barrett proposed an oil refinery for the Merritt area.

He has promised no nuclear power for B.C. or uranium mining.

He would bring back the $1 per ton coal royalty suspended three years ago by the Socreds.

And he would form an economic advisory council of business and labor representatives to advise the premier on economic and labor management problems.

The NDP also says it won't allow Ocean Falls to be sold.

On transportation, the NDP would introduce a 20 per cent reduction for commuters and free ferries for handicapped.

And he would provided direct transporation links between Powell River and Vancouver and lower ferry rates for Comox-Powell River commuters.

Barrett also promised to bring back community resource boards, which were eliminated by Social Credit.

The NDP would expand the B.C. Development Corporation and open regional offices to provide loans geared to indigenous industries.

An NDP government would try to start tri-lateral discussions on land claims involving B.C., Canada and native Indians.

And he promised a ministry of fisheries.

NDP would reintroduce the Fair Employment Practices Act giving preference on government contracts to firms with union employers. The Socreds repealed the Act.

The NDP promised an increase in the minimum wage.

The NDP would not reintroduce a mineral royalty tax brought in when the party was in power.

Barrett said an NDP government would reduce bus fares to attract commuters, but the cuts would not be dramatic.

Barrett indicated NDP would not continue with the highway through the Coquihalla Pass at least for the time being.

The NDP would support a national food pricing board to control prices.

An NDP government would reopen the investigation into the question of middlemen and monopolies in the food industry in B.C.

Barrett has also promised a portable pension plan for housewives.

SOCIAL CREDIT

Premier Bill Bennett has already implemented the reduction in sales tax to four per cent as laid out in the budget that came down the day before the election was called.

Bennett promised all proposals in the budget will be carried out if re-elected.

These include a reduction in personal income tax of two per cent and other income tax reforms to aid low income earners.

— property tax for school purposes on farm land reduced by 50 per cent.

— homeowner grant upped $100 to $380 for general homeowner and $580 for seniors.

— renters grant increased by $50.

— $37.5 million in grants to the cities of Vancouver and Victoria for major capital projects.

— a universal Denticare plan for those not already covered by other plans.

— a Bill of Rights.

— the ending of discrimination for age and sex and marital status for auto insurance.

— more funds for the Fort Nelson rail link, reforestation and job creation programs for young people.

— sports bursaries for university students and double the amount of scholarships for school students going on to post secondary institutions.

Along the election trail, Bennett added the promise of a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island and a $1 million 413-acre provincial park to be established on the the west side of Okanagan Lake.

Like the NDP, the Socreds will not allow nuclear power development in B.C. But their stand on uranium mining is less definitive.

The Socreds will proclaim amendments to the building code that will make all public buildings accessible to the handicapped.

B.C. '79

Other Socred promises are general statements of party policy and therefore a bit vague.

For example, the party pledges "continued expansion and modernization of B.C. hospitals . . . a new program for gifted children . . . expanded job training . . . special program for children with learning disabilities . . . controlled government spending . . . greatly expanded services for handicapped children."

The Socreds also say they will continue to develop natural resources to ensure economic growth while safeguarding the environment and will maintain a strong position with Ottawa over resource rights, especially gas and oil in the northern part of the province.

And the party is committed to improve and expand all government-administered transportation systems and facitities.

Candidates 'Exploiting' Sick, Aged

TERRACE (CP) — Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said Tuesday all candidates should be banned from hospitals and rest homes during election campaigns so the sick and elderly cannot be exploited.

Shelford agreed that such a ban, if in effect for the current campaign, would have cramped the style of Premier Bill Bennett who has visited up to half a dozen rest homes and senior citizen centres a day.

However, he said the New Democratic Party has tried to frighten patients and residents in an effort to win votes.

"My concern is that they go into hospitals and rest homes and tell the old people that Social Credit is going to close it or cut back on staff," he said. "Old people get terribly upset because they'll believe anything when they're in that condition.

"Over 21 of them were crying in one home in Smithers alone after a visit."

In Port Coquitlam, NDP leader Dave Barrett said he visited only two rest homes during the campaign, after being invited.

Premier Bennett said: "When I go, I make them feel good."

Shelford, 58, who wants to introduce an amendment to the Elections Act to ban such visits, said no one party can be blamed and that the NDP uses such tactics because it is the opposition.

"Naturally government leaders aren't going to be saying that people are going to be thrown out on to the streets but the opposition is."

Shelford is involved in a close race in B.C.'s northwestern Skeena riding with NDP candidate Frank Howard, who represented the riding once provincially, and held it federally from 1957 to 1974. The tension is one reason given by party workers to explain the high incidence of vandalism against signs put up by both parties.

NDP signs in Smithers were painted with swastikas last week and the majority of the signs there were destroyed Sunday.

After the initial vandalism, the NDP began a watch on party signs and released a description on radio of a yellow van that party workers said was involved in the vandalism.

Dick Bates, the chairman of the Social Credit sign committee, said Tuesday he has been harassed since that report because he drives a yellow van. He denied having been involved in vandalism.

"I've been pointed out publicly and I've received threatening calls," he said. "The worst one just said that if I didn't lay off the signs, I'd go into the river."

Shelford said no party condones such behavior.

"I think it's just a matter of overanxious campaign workers."

He said he was upset about the destruction of Social Credit signs because the plywood from which they are made is to be donated to a workshop for the mentally retarded after the election.

Plumper Bay Tipped for Oil Tanks

The probable site of the controversial oil tank farm was revealed in confidential information handed to the press today.

The Plumper Bay property at Hallowell and Admirals Road was singled out as the most promising in a confidential letter from Shirley Dowell, chairman of the Capital Regional District's tank farm relocation committee.

The letter was sent to the district's electoral area services committee and was distributed to the media at a committee meeting today.

"Unfortunately, if it (the Plumper Bay property) is to be used for this purpose, not only must it be rezoned but the Official Settlement Plan for View Royal must be amended as well," Dowell said in her letter.

The letter said such a change would be a very sensitive matter among View Royal residents.

"If the district is to be successful it is absolutely essential that these negotiations and discussions be treated with the utmost confidentiality and no releases be made to members of the news media."

Early last week Dowell had told the press that the oil tank companies, facing deadlines to move from the Inner Harbor sites, favored relocating on property owned by Victoria Plywood Ltd. on Plumper Bay adjacent to the mill.

She had made the statement after the board had met secretly with the oil company representatives. Earlier, board chairman Murray Glazier had refused to give any details.

Voting Day

The same procedure is followed for those outside their ridings on election day.

They may cast a sealed ballot at any polling station in B.C. and the vote is mailed to the correct riding to be tabulated for the final count.

A person who has recently moved can legally vote in the riding he was formerly registered in with a sealed ballot unless, of course, he registered a second time in the new riding.

Every election hundreds of ballots are rejected. Some are intentionally destroyed, but many are accidents which in effect disenfranchise the voter.

The only valid ballot is one which is marked in the form of an X using the pencil provided in the polling booth.

The pencilled X must stay within the space provided.

By provincial law, an employer must allow his employees four clear hours for voting on Thursday. The employer may decide to have the employee report for work at noon, or leave at 4 p.m. It is at his discretion.

Also by provincial law, candidates for the party in power (Social Credit) come first in alphabetical order, followed by the official opposition candidates in alphabetical order (NDP).

They are followed by Independents, and finally all other registered parties.

For example, the ballot in Victoria where two candidates are to be elected will carry instructions to mark two candidates and will look like this:

BAWLF
Sam Bawlf of Victoria
Businessman
Social Credit Party
YOUNG
Mike Young of Victoria
Lawyer
Social Credit Party
BARBER
Charles Frederick of Victoria
Community worker
New Democratic Party
HANSON
Gordon William of Victoria
Archeologist-government employee representative
New Democratic Party
LINDSAY
W. Jack Lindsay of Victoria
Manager
Progressive Conservative Party
LYNN
Maggie Lynn of Victoria
Retired
EASTON
Michael Edward Easton of Victoria
Unemployed
Western Independence Party

Any voter uncertain of his polling place should go to any polling station — usually located in neighborhood schools — and ask officials there.

Gas Controls Start In Calif.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — After weeks of lining up in frustration for gasoline, or hoarding it in panic, almost two of every three Californians today fell under a gasoline rationing program based on their licence plate numbers.

"This is very strong medicine," Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said as he signed an emergency proclamation Tuesday. "But the situation demands it.

"My hunch is that things are going to be difficult for a period of time," he said. He gave no estimate of how long, but urged drivers to use car pools and public transportation — and to ask themselves each time they get into their cars: "Is this trip really necessary?"

Ironically, he signed the bill and made his statement in San Francisco, a city not yet under restrictions. The plan leaves it up to county governments whether to ask to be included, and so far only eight of the state's 58 counties have done so.

Nevertheless, those counties contain almost two-thirds of California's population, and most of the biggest cities — among them Los Angeles, San Diego, San Jose and Oakland.

Under the plan, motorists can buy gasoline only on alternate days. Those with odd-numbered plates can buy gasoline today. On Thursday, it will be the turn of cars with even-numbered plates, and so on.

knew what he was doing," Stallings said.

Wallmeyer said Vepco and the FBI have impounded records of entry to the fuel storge area and will be going over them to see which Vepco employees and construction contract workers had access to the site.

About 200 to 250 Vepco employees work at the Surry plant, whose two units are currently shut down pending the repair of steam generators at Surry No. 1 and inspecction of seismic equipment at Surry No. 2.

Vepco has notified the Nuclear Regulatory Commission about the incident, and a regional spokesman for the agency said Tuesday investigation of "what appears to be a criminal act" would be left to the FBI.

The 23-7 Congressional vote came despite a plea by Chairman Morris Udall, D-Ariz., who said although he sympathizes with the majority, the vote would ruin the credibility of the committee's already planned three-month probe into all aspects of the nuclear power program.

Meanwhile in New Bern, North Carolina, 39-year-old David Learned Dale, who admitted he took two cans of uranium from a nuclear manufacturing plant and demanded $100,000, has been sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Dale was employed by a subcontractor at the General Electric plant in Wilmington, Delaware, when the low-grade uranium was stolen from the plant in January.

He testified at a sentencing hearing Tuesday that he was disturbed because his job was about to end and that he now is sorry for the problems he caused.

"I can't excuse what happened," Dale said. "I know it was wrong. I'll take whatever punishment the court gives me."

A plant official testified that the extortion plot cost the company $1 million. He said the uranium was valued at $50,000 and the plant was closed two days while employees searched for the missing uranium.

Just when they almost had us believing them, in came Health Minister Bob McClelland riding an elephant.

That's the end. We can pardon Monday night's Socred Circus in Vancouver's Coliseum for featuring (along with Premier Bennett) jugglers, people dressed in bear costumes, disco dancers and a woman on a giant unicycle. But an elephant, a live elephant?

Not that supplying cabinet ministers with elephants as standard kit is really all wrong . . . that mode of transport would be in keeping with the speed in which they get things done. Maybe we could have elephant hitching posts installed outside the Legislative Buildings.

But doesn't it make you question the credibility of an individual, of the party and perhaps even of politicians as a whole when, in order to be a big enough man for people to take notice of him, a minister has to make his entrance on the back of an elephant?

Credibility, in fact, has been a big talking point in both provincial and federal election campaigns.

And that's another thing. Did we really have to have two elections on top of each other? One is draining enough.

All we keep hearing about is how exhausting it is for the poor politicians hot on the campaign trail. How Mrs. Bennett almost nodded off during one rally. Well, there are a few of us out here finding it pretty hard to stay awake in the midst of all the political drivel that's been coming our way.

More interesting by far than all the paid political ads (my God, I thought the ones for hairsprays and headache tablets were bad enough) and all the campaign speeches are the letters to the editor.

The mood in many of the letters has been a questioning one — a searching for some kind of commitment from any political party — and a disillusionment at the lack of honesty.

One well-written letter urged both the NDP and Socreds to outline their stand on issues like forestry, fishing, property taxes, ferry improvements, public transit, law enforcement and housing.

We haven't really heard their stand. We've heard them stand on one another. We've heard the NDP tell us what the Socreds have been doing wrong since they've been in power. We've heard the Socreds tell us what the NDP did wrong when they were in power. And we've heard the parties warn what each other will do wrong if either is elected this time. And in the background we've heard the provincial Tories and Liberals say what everyone has been doing wrong.

What a hell of a lot of wrongs! What about someone being specific and telling us what they would do right, given the chance? It would make them all seem a little more believable if only some of them would admit they have no answers to unemployment or high costs. But no. We couldn't have that. We mustn't be negative. Ha!

"It is interesting how some politicians try to impress the electorate with lies just to gain votes," the writer said. "They must think that everyone is stupid enough to believe their honesty even when we know that everything they say is pure lies."

Didn't someone say once a change is as good as a holiday? Well, for the sake of those who just might not be able to afford a holiday the way things are going, maybe it's time for a change.

Maybe, too, Bill Bennett and the Socreds had an ulterior motive when they chose the date they did for an election. This is Be Kind to Animals Week.

And finally, out of all the signs I've read recently I like the one folksinger-sailor-boatbuilder Tony Latimer has in front of his home in Cobble Hill.

Right across the country road from a neighbor's signs imploring residents to vote for Manly and Wallace, Tony has two large pieces of paper stretched between chunks of wood.

On one it says Hooray, Hooray, the First of May; Outdoor Loving Begins Today. And on the other it reads Remember, No Matter Who You Vote For, a Politician Still Gets In.

It'll Be Close, Say Young Pundits

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

If the youngsters in Gerry Bell's creative writing course at View Royal elementary school are any indication, Thursday's provincial election promises to be a close battle between the two major parties.

About half the youngsters, aged 11 to 12, picked the Socreds to win; the other half chose the New Democratic Party.

Nearly all felt the other two parties, Liberals and Conservatives, would make slight gains.

And one boy — could he be a cynic? — predicted the number of vacancies in the Legislature, which stood at two at dissolution, would soar to 10 after the election.

The forecasts were made Tuesday in a questionnaire that Bell, principal of the school, gave the 21 students in his class to measure their awareness of the provincial campaign.

Most of the students knew the two main candidates in the riding (Esquimalt-Port Renfrew). Seventeen correctly named Socred Lyle Kahl and 16 got the NDP's Frank Mitchell. Eight students recalled the Conservative candidate Bill Langlois' name but only one included Western Independence candidate Doug Christie.

There was some obvious confusion with the federal campaign in the overlapping riding of Esquimalt-Malahat. Five students put down federal NDP Jim Manly as a provincial candidate, four named Liberal David Anderson and one recorded Conservative Don Taylor.

John Mika was named as a candidate by 10 students. Mika is provincial NDP standard-bearer in the adjacent riding of Saanich and the Islands.

The issues as seen by the children were wide-ranging. Several noted the new hospital, taxes and insurance. One pupil, Tiffany, added fuel and cost of living to her list. Brian recorded labor, ecology and law in that order of priority. Johnny put down "working hours."

Greg said "some of the issues are people sobbing about if you should own your house or not."

Mark replied the issue is "Why is 'Benet' keeping empty promises?"

Wendy noted with candor that "the issues in this election are I don't know."

But perhaps the most intriguing response came from Marcus: "Some issues I have heard are the NDP said that they would lower car insurance and they would get proper knives and forks on the ferrys."

Sasha replied it is because "people get tired of the guys they elected last time."

Mark felt it is because people want to get rid of "crudy candidates and presidents."

Brian said frankly "I don't really know why," but Nancy offered this answer: "I think maybe the people don't want Kahl any more or someone that might give them more of what people want."

Only one student could name the leaders of the three major parties. Several felt Kahl and Mitchell were the heads of their respective parties. Two students put down Mika's name as leader of the Conservatives, and Langlois was touted the Liberal leader by one student.

Johnny took a stab at naming the leaders: "Bennet," he ventured, then admitted "I don't know . . . Mike Young?"

The Party Faithful Slings Some Mud

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The converted were out to sling a little mud at the opposition during a Victoria riding provincial all-candidates meeting Tuesday night.

As an example, Judy Nyquist, Socred candidate Sam Bawlf's constituency secretary, asked NDP hopeful Charles Barber if he believed in gainful employment.

She asked him why he had always lived off government grants and never held a job "like the rest of us."

Barber turned the question on Nyquist, saying it was a bit much coming from a person who had once worked for the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children and was now "feeding at the public trough" as Bawlf's secretary.

He added jokingly that he believed in gainful employment for everyone but himself.

During the meeting attended by about 65 people at the Jaycees Hall on Quadra, both the NDP and the Socred candidates tossed out figures to prove the other party's administration was fiscally irresponsible.

Bawlf and his running mate, Victoria Mayor Mike Young, raised the possibility of a deal between the NDP and "the labor bosses."

"What price do we have to pay for that?" asked Young.

Barber and his colleague, Gordon Hanson, said the Socreds lack credibility and during their term in office have contributed to increased inflation and unemployment.

The two Conservative candidates, Jack Lindsay and Maggi Lynn, criticized the two parties for "tarring one another" and lauded the value of having a third choice in provincial politics.

During one attack on the Socreds' economic policies, Hanson quoted from a report by Dr. John McCallum of the department of economics and commerce at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby.

McCallum studied the effects of B.C. government policies on inflation and unemployment during the years 1976-78 and concludes that Socred policies managed to raise both.

He says in his report, completed last month, that by increasing private sector prices — sales taxes — and public sector taxes — car insurance, ferries, buses — the government raised the price level and raised unemployment by reducing the purchasing power of the private sector.

If the government had refrained from raising the sales tax or prices of public sector goods or services there could have been a one-per-cent reduction in the consumer price index, an additional 7,000 permanent jobs and a reduction in the unemployment rate by about .4 per cent, McCallum says.

When asked about the rate increases, Bawlf said people pay for such public services either through rates or taxes.

"There's no magic tree where the money comes from," he said to some applause.

He was also questioned on the party's five-per-cent guideline for hospital budget increases.

Bawlf said the figure was just that, a guideline, and not a firm position.

He said current charges of hospital cutbacks and layoffs as a result of the guideline were an example of the big lie technique where no matter how untrue a statement is, if it is repeated often enough people begin to believe it.

Barber seized on the issue and appeared to have the support of those in attendance when he said the doctors and nurses have been criticising the Socreds for their cold-hearted policies.

He said the medical staff at Royal Jubilee Hospital has come out publicly on the issue as has the B.C. Medical Journal.

"Either you believe all of these doctors and nurses are involved in some commie plot . . . or what is happening is a cutback in services."

Second CUPE Rejection

The Capital Region District's 200 employees have become the second group of public sector workers to reject the "final offer" from the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

Members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1978, voted 56 per cent to reject the offer at a meeting Tuesday night.

The employer package, which includes a 7.25-per-cent increase in each year of a two-year agreement, was earlier turned down by the 300-member Local 388, representing city inside workers.

Local 1978 secretary Margaret Gibson said the main issue is not wages but what management wants to remove from the contract.

One contentious demand by the GVLRA is for removal of a clause allowing for paid leave for union people attending negotiations or arbitration hearings.

The GVLRA wants the union to pick up the tab for the employees' lost time.

Gibson said the direction the local's negotiators received from the membership Tuesday night was they would be willing to accept a one-year agreement with a 7.25-per-cent increase if the paid-leave clause was left intact.

Aldermen Alarmed By Spiralling Crime

Two Victoria aldermen have expressed alarm over the city's spiralling crime rate.

Ald. Bill McElroy Tuesday called on the city to hire 10 more police officers and Ald. Robin Blencoe today said the situation is so urgent it calls for emergency action by the Victoria Police Board.

Blencoe said a major offensive has to be launched immediately against breaking-and-entry, vandalism and other property crimes.

In 1978 break-ins and related property crimes jumped almost 20 per cent in Victoria. Some 2,197 buildings were forcibly entered while there were 1,532 reported cases of vandalism and 4,198 thefts under $200.

Blencoe said the recently released crime statistics are shocking, but the police board is taking no action on the problem.

For the past two years Blencoe has been advocating new community-based team policing methods for the city, and one year ago won an agreement from the police board to look at the possibility of alternative policing methods.

Blencoe said the lack of action by the board, which is chaired by Mayor Mike Young, has lead the city into an emergency situation.

"The community cannot afford to wait any longer. While the police board studies, citizens are fast becoming apprehensive for the safety of their homes and businesses," said Blencoe. "We cannot wait another year while the crime rate goes up another 10 or 15 per cent."

Blencoe said "there have been indications for two years that it was essential we get into preventative policing on a scale at least equal to that of detection policing if we were to avoid the crime rates that are before us today.

"However, the powers-that-be, including the chairman of the police board (Young), chose to ignore those indications.

"Now . . . we are having to react to an emergency situation."

In a letter to the board Blencoe calls for an all-out attack.

He said a program aimed at property crimes should include:

— A greater emphasis on preventative measures such as Neighborhood Watch and Business Watch.

— An effort to involve neighborhood groups in fighting crime.

Blencoe also called on the commission to report on its study into community-based policing concepts and to set up a pilot project to test neighborhood policing.

In a separate statement Tuesday, Ald. McElroy also expressed concern about Victoria's soaring crime rate.

He said the city should take the $352,000 it recently cut from the 1979 budget and use it to hire 10 more policemen.

Interviewed following a special council meeting which saw the $32 million city budget passed, McElroy said the money recently cut from the budget should be used elsewhere.

He said the city is in the business of providing services to the public and the rising crime rate shows more police officers are needed.

McElroy made the suggestion during the council meeting, but was ignored by all but Blencoe, who supported the suggestion.

"There tends to be a fascination in budgets with capital expenditure. Everyone's happy to buy a big, shiny new piece of equipment, but when you start to talk about manpower and salaries, that's when people crack down," McElroy said.

Centennial Bomb A Dud

The Armed Forces bomb squad detonated a device police found in the pocket of a man picked up for being intoxicated.

Police cordoned off the area for more than an hour while experts examined the device, then exploded it in a concrete planter.

A spokesman said today the man was rummaging through garbage cans on Esquimalt Road at 1:30 p.m. when he came across a small package wrapped in black tape with wires protruding. He stuffed it in his pocket.

An officer spotted the man in the square about 7:40 p.m. and was taking him to the police station when he discovered the package in his pocket. He gingerly put it in the planter.

Boat Sinks But Two Safe

They are Clive Amos and deckhand Ed Jeffer.

Book-Keeper Jailed Two Years for Theft

A 54-year-old Victoria book-keeper was sentenced in county court today to two years less one day in jail for theft of $7,470 from Sound Hounds record and stereo equipment store where she worked last year.

Grace Fisher pleaded guilty before Judge Montague Drake, who in brief remarks said that in crimes of this sort he had to be concerned with the interests of the community.

Her lawyer, Mike Hutchison, had argued in favor of probation, saying jail would do nothing for her or society. What she needed, he said, was extended probation including psychological counselling.

He said her problem was that she couldn't cope with stress and was the victim of the credit society in a scheme which was not clever or sophisticated and which would inevitably be detected.

Crown counsel J.W. Anderson said during the five months or so that Mrs. Fisher worked for Sound Hounds she was responsible for the firm's money.

She removed $7,470 by a system called "lapping" in which cash from daily receipts was removed and the shortage made up by incoming cheques from later transactions.

He said she was sentenced in Vancouver in 1967 to six years in the penitentiary for theft of $249,000 over a period of nine years from a branch of the Bank of Montreal where she had worked as an accountant.

She kept deposits and failed to process the accounts into the records, thus producing an apparent balance.

He said there was no suggestion that she did not appreciate what she did in either crime.

Hutchison said she spent only two years in penitentiary before being released on parole and coming to Victoria where she worked as a book-keeper until last May.

Four years ago, he said, she received an inheritance of $25,000 and developed a lifestyle she was incapable of supporting, including a locked-in house lease costing more than $800 per month.

He said she succumbed to the easy accessibility to cash at Sound Hounds.

Jail Only Answer: Judge

A 25-year-old man with a criminal record was sentenced in county court Tuesday to 18 months in jail for two break-ins and theft of narcotics and other drugs.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart told David Michael Henderson he had a serious problem and all he could do was imprison him so he could not commit such offences.

Henderson pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and theft at the Royal Jubilee Hospital emergency ward April 29, 1978, and breaking and entering and theft at a doctor's office April 21, 1979, at 1900 Richmond. Drugs such as codeine, morphine, demerol, valium and others were stolen.

Henderson's criminal record includes possession of heroin, possession of stolen property, attempted breaking and entering, theft, being unlawfully in a dwelling, attempted uttering and loitering by night.

In another case, Stewart sentenced two teen-agers to jail for property offences, one of which involved them breaking into an apartment at night April 5 and stealing a variety of articles.

Frederick Robert Ward Haldane, 17, was sentenced to one year for the apartment break-in and three months for breaking into a gas station, the terms to be served at the same time.

Bruce Douglas Jefferies, 19, was sentenced to six months for the apartment breakin, 30 days for possession of stolen goods and four months for another charge of possession of stolen goods, the terms also to be served concurrently. This will be followed by two years probation.

Stewart said it is very serious to break into a private residence in the middle of the night and the only mitigating factor was that nothing was done to harm the two occupants.

"I am afraid, much as I dislike sending young men to jail, that it's the only answer in each case," he said.

Both men have prior records.

In another case, Judge Montague Drake sentenced two men to a nominal one day in jail after they pleaded guilty to possession of one pound of hashish for the purpose of trafficking in a 3½-year-old case.

Drake said the circumstances in which Michael James Adam Ballantyne, 26, and Kenneth Joseph Witzaney, 29, now found themselves were exceptional to a degree.

He said it was rather extraordinary that there had originally been a charge of conspiracy with lengthy proceedings resulting in an acquittal, then the laying of the present charges.

He said both men have no criminal record, were hardworking, there was no evidence of repeating this kind of offence and some evidence of maturing.

The prosecution made no submission of what would be an appropriate sentence because of the length of time which had passed.

The two men were in a car which had left the Swartz Bay ferry terminal. They were stopped in Central Saanich Oct. 8, 1975, and one pound of hashish was found.

A third man accused with them, Patrick Joseph McLoughlin, did not appear and court was told an arrest warrant was issued earlier.

Before The Judge

A 35-year-old man who had two charges quashed and was found not guilty on another last week in Victoria County Court wasn't as fortunate Tuesday in Victoria provincial court.

A motion to quash three new charges against Frank Piersanti, also known as Steven Cavanaugh Manning, was denied by Judge William Ostler, as was an application for bail.

Piersanti was charged last Friday with conspiracy to traffic in marijuana and importing marijuana into Canada between April 1 and July 16 last year, and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking on July 15, all in the county of Nanaimo.

Defence lawyer Patrick Sweeney's motion for quashing the charges was based on the fact that the Chicago-born Piersanti was an American citizen and the court had no jurisdiction to deal with the charges without consent from the attorney-general of Canada.

Ostler pointed out that Section 433(1) of the Criminal Code of Canada referred to offences on territorial sea and waters off the coast and that 433(2) required the consent of the attorney-general of Canada in the case of non-Canadians. While he agreed with the law and Millward's ruling, Ostler said he was satisfied the attorney-general's consent was in existence at the time the new charges were laid and he denied the motion to quash the charges of importing and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

He also disallowed the motion concerning the conspiracy charge on the grounds it was not the same one which was before the higher court. Piersanti had been charged with conspiracy to import marijuana into Canada and was found not guilty on that charge. The new charge was conspiracy to traffic in marijuana.

After the ruling and the denial of the bail application, Sweeney elected trial by judge and jury on behalf of Piersanti and waived his client's right to a preliminary hearing. A trial date will be set in Victoria County Court later.

John Maxim, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property and supplying liquor to a minor and was given sentences of six months and one month, to be served concurrently, with a recommendation that he be placed at the Alouette River unit for the treatment of alcoholism, where he served his last sentence.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Maxim was in possession of several saris, an East Indian native dress, valued at $350 which were stolen from the rear of a car April 17. Mulligan said Maxim told Victoria city police he tried to sell them but failed.

In connection with the charge of supplying liquor to a minor, Mulligan said Maxim was seen handing over a case of beer to a 13-year-old Jan. 27.

Maxim's record includes convictions dating back to 1964 for theft, uttering and possession of stolen property. He was sentenced to six months on March 29, 1978, for two counts of theft and one count of possession of stolen property.

Defence lawyer James Main said Maxim spent his time at the Alouette River unit and liked the program there. Main said his client requested that the recommendation be put forward that the sentence be served there again.

Ostler said he would do so but said the ultimate decision was up to the authorities there.

Underdog Rangers Are In

NEW YORK (CP) — Dave Maloney, captain of New York Rangers, smiled wryly and said: "Any guy in his right mind wouldn't have bet on us at the start of the playoffs."

The 22-year-old National Hockey League defenceman, his sweat-soaked hair plastered in strings across his forehead, was savoring the thrill of being a victorious underdog after his team eliminated New York Islanders from the Stanley Cup playoffs Tuesday night. The Rangers beat their hometown rivals 2-1 to win the semi-final series 4-2 and advance to the final round against the winner of the Montreal Canadiens-Boston Bruins series which will be decided Thursday night in Montreal.

The Rangers won the series with a combination of gritty checking, never-say-die playmaking and heroic goaltending. They fought back in the final game from a weak first period that saw the Islanders take 1-0 lead on a power-play goal by Mike Bossy.

But the Rangers stormed out in the second to tie the score on Don Murdoch's goal and went ahead on a score by Ron Greschner. They then concentrated on defence to maintain their narrow margin through the final period.

"Everyone dug in in the third period and that was the thing," the Rangers' captain said. "We could taste it."

But he gave the Islanders credit for a determined effort.

"They came out bumping in the first period. I got biffed about three times. I thought the first period was our worst of the series."

In that first period, the Islanders attacked from the opening faceoff, forcing Rangers goaltender John Davidson to make some clutch saves.

The Rangers came back in the second. Mario Marois blasted a hard shot from the point that was blocked by Islanders' goaltender Chico Resch, but Murdoch grabbed the rebound on his backhand, spun around and hoisted it over the sprawled Resch.

About three minutes later, the Islanders' Bob Lorimer was sent off.

Phil Esposito and Don Maloney worked the puck out to the blueline to Greschner. He took a couple of steps towards the net and then rifled a hard, low shot that beat Resch cleanly.

"I never saw it," the goalie said later.

Referee Wally Harris, who called only nine minor penalties throughout, seemed content to let things slide by, for the most part. While the partisan crowd screamed in outrage, punches were thrown and players hooked on both teams.

At one point, Stefan Persson of the Islanders and Lucien DebLois of the Rangers were embroiled in a fight at one end of the rink while the play swirled around the other. It was several moments before Harris noticed the scuffle and, although both players were wrestling and throwing punches on the ice when the linesmen arrived to separate them, Harris assessed them only minor roughing penalties.

There were punishing hits on both sides. Wayne Merrick of the Islanders ran into a stiff check from Marois and had to be removed from the ice on a stretcher. He was taken to hospital for x-rays of a shoulder injury.

The Rangers' Ron Duguay was helped to the first-aid station late in the third period after running into Denis Potvin. As the two collided, Potvin's stick came around by accident and clipped the Rangers forward hard in the back of the head.

In the third period, however the Islanders were desperate and it showed in the collapse of their attack.

"Everybody could sense it after a while," said Don Maloney. "It's like an animal sensing its prey, sensing for the kill."

Davidson, whose work in goal helped shut down the Islanders' high-scoring line of Bossy, Bryan Trottier and Clark Gillies, was full of praise for the cross-town rivals.

"They never let down," he said. "They just worked and worked and worked. It's just a shame there's always a loser. I've got respect for those fellows — a lot of it."

What did the Rangers do in the playoffs that they did not do in the regular season, when they finished third behind the Islanders and Philadelphia Flyers in the Patrick Division?

"Just about everything you can think of, they did better than in the regular season," Islanders defenceman Denis Potvin said.

Canadian Girls Salvage Victory In Final Second

SEOUL (AP) — With a dramatic final-second goal, unbeaten Canada picked up a crucial 56-55 victory over Japan, and Italy defeated France 72-54 today in the finals round of the 8th world women's basketball championship.

Sylvia Sweeney's field goal, which barely beat the final gun, prevented Japan from pulling a major upset against strongly-favored Canada in the seven-country championship round.

The shorter but aggressive Japanese gave the Canadians their biggest scare in the tournament so far, pulling into a tie or leading 22 times.

The last-minute drama started when the Japanese were in control of the ball and leading 55 to 54. They intended to keep the ball as long as possible to give the Canadians as little time with the ball as possible.

But they held it too long without shooting and captain Miho Matsuoka violated the 30-second rule to yield the ball to Canada with eight seconds to go.

Sweeney was the top scorer for the Canadian squad with 18 points. Candy Clarkson of Ancaster, Ont., was the only other Canadian to hit for double figures, with 10 points.

Chris Critelli of St. Catharines, Ont., had eight; Luanne Hebb of Victoria and Debie Husband of Montreal scored six each.

Canada, with a 4-0 record in the championship round, is the only unbeaten team in the tournament. The host South Koreans are 3-1 while Australia and the U.S. are 2-1. Italy and Japan, both 1-3, and France, 0-4, bring up the lower end of the championship round-robin standings.

Cherry Asks for More And Bruins Force Limit

BOSTON (CP) — Coach Don Cherry asked his Boston Bruins for one more effort — with feeling — and the result is a seventh game in their National Hockey League semi-final series against Montreal Canadiens.

"I told them it could be my last game here," said Cherry before sending the Bruins out to smother the Canadiens 5-2 Tuesday night and set up the deciding game in the best-of-seven series Thursday night at Montreal.

"I said it possibly would be the last game for quite a few of us in the Stanley Cup semi-finals, because maybe we'll go through our whole careers from now on and never get to the semi-finals again.

"I said, 'If you've got anything to give, don't lay back and don't have anything left after the game, because we might not all be together next year.' "

Wayne Cashman — with the winner from heavy traffic in front of the net at 16:30 of the second period — and Don Marcotte scored the other Boston goals, while Larry Robinson and Pierre Mondou hit for the Canadiens, who fired 27 shots at Gilles Gilbert.

Marcotte's shot from deep in the circle on the left wing beat Dryden high at 12:21 for a 2-1 Bruins lead, but Mondou backhanded a shot past an awkward Gilbert at 12:48 to make it 2-2.

Cashman had Montreal defenceman Guy Lapointe draped all over him when a shot from the right point by Brad Park — playing with a shot for a damaged right knee — ticked off his skate and into the net.

"Off the draw, Peter McNab got the draw over to (Terry) O'Reilly, and he got it back to Parky," Cashman said.

"Parky and I have been talking about something like that for quite a while. I've always said, 'I'll be in front, and if you can't see some opening, just shoot the puck right at me, at my feet or my legs or something, and I'll open my legs at the last moment or something, but at least I'll be in front.'

"I think that's what he did, and it apparently hit my skate and went in, I don't know. The scorer said on the instant replay it showed it, but I don't know."

Jonathan fired a pair of third-period goals to clinch the victory, bulling the puck into the Canadiens net at 7:23, and capping a fine forechecking performance with a goal at 15:24 after Cashman's set-up pass.

The seventh game, to determine who meets New York Rangers in the final, starts at 5 p.m. PDT Thursday, and will be carried on the full CBC television network.

Oilers Meet Jets in Final

The Oilers beat New England Whalers 6-3 Tuesday night in the seventh and deciding game of a semi-final encounter for their first-ever victory in a WHA playoff series. Earlier they had finished first in the league.

It put them into the championship final against Winnipeg Jets — a nice change for a club that had never won more than one game in four previous playoff outings.

The best-of-seven title series opens in Edmonton Friday and Sunday nights. If the Oilers beat the Jets there's a treat waiting for the players. Owner Peter Pocklington has promised to send them and their wives to an all-expenses paid vacation.

Dennis Sobchuk had a goal and two assists. Wayne Gretzky, the Oilers millionaire teen-age centre, had two goals. The other Edmonton scorers were Blair MacDonald, Ron Chipperfield and Bill Flett. New England goals went to Andre Lacroix, Blaine Stoughton and Mike Antonovich.

Gretzky finished the series with 15 points — a record for a seven-game playoff and the most ever scored in a WHA semi-final.

Wheaties Toppled

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Jim Wiemer scored 15 goals with Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League this season, but he won't treasure any of those more than his overtime effort in Memorial Cup play Tuesday night.

The 17-year-old rookie scored his second goal of the game two minutes and 31 seconds into overtime to earn the Petes their first victory of the series, a 7-6 decision over Brandon Wheat Kings of the Western Hockey League — the second loss in as many nights for the Westerners.

The Petes, who lost a 4-3 decision to Trois-Rivieres Draveurs of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League last Sunday, threatened to turn the game into a rout in the opening period as they scored two goals before the game had eached the three-minute mark.

But the Brandon team rallied to tie the game 2-2, only to have Peterborough rebound for a 4-2 lead.

Brandon's heralded trio of Propp, Allison and Laurie Boschman then got untracked for the first time in the series, with Propp and Allison scoring two of the Westerners four unanswered second-period goals.

Wiemer and Smith, at 17:24, scored in the third-period goals to send the battle into overtime.

Cables Still Hot

Burnaby Cablevision proved Tuesday they have lost none of the spark which carried them to the Minto Cup national title last season.

Cables exploded for a 10-3 lead in the first period and went on to drop Esquimalt Legion 16-11 before approximately 300 fans in a Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Legion's lack of ball control was painfully evident in countless turnovers in both ends and bobbled passes.

Goaltender Mike Duch, the all-star runner-up last season, made some excellent saves for Esquimalt early in the first period but buckled under the pressure later on and was replaced by Bill Thomas at 15:20 with the score 6-1.

Duch regained his composure and played the last two periods.

Burnaby's all-star netminder Rod Bannister didn't have much to do in the first period but made several key saves when Legion started to find the range in the second.

He, too, was chased in the third when Esquimalt marksmen came up with four successive goals. His replacement, Jim Bebyck, then limited Legion to one goal the rest of the way.

Dalmonte and Dan McLenaghan each scored three goals for Burnaby while John Swan, Gordie Roberts and Paulo Brunoro connected for two each and singles were added by Wayne Hanada, Lloyd Simons, Gary Purdon and Craig Wilson.

Kluane National Park Plan Going Public For Last Time

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

The third and final stage of public reveiw for planning the future of Kluane National Park, a magnificent 8,500 square mile tract of wilderness in the southwestern corner of the Yukon, now is underway.

A series of public meetings — six in the Yukon and one each in British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba — has been called by Parks Canada to discuss a proposed plan for the use and management of Kluane.

The British Columbia meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., June 4 at Vancouver Community College, Langara Campus, 100 West 49th Avenue, Room A130.

Public input has been brought into the planning process during the past two summers and the eventual plan which emerges after this step will guide the development of Kluane over the next 10 to 15 years in such matters as trails, campgrounds, roads and zoning.

Kluane, which encompasses the largest non-polar glacier system in the world, contains the most massive and highest mountain ranges in Canada as well as rich plant and animal life.

The management plan proposal makes a number of interesting compromises to provide opportunities for people to visit the park and enjoy its splendor without having a major impact on the environement.

"To provide the people of Canada with the opportunity to see and appreciate these characteristics, some major access proposals have been accepted. A public transit system is proposed to take visitors from the Alaska Highway at the south end of Kluane Lake up the Slims River to a viewpoint on Vulcan Mountain overlooking the Kaskawulsh Glacier. This system would have great potential for interpreting the ever-changing Kluane landscape and the character of the glaciers which are the dominating influence.

"Another public transit system, a combination of bus and boat, provides access to different opportunities in the south end of the park. Along the Alder Creek, Mush Lake and Bates Lake drainage system, the transit system connects many trail heads which lead to areas suitable to backcountry recreation. Wildlife abounds in this area, evidence of early mining activity is still visible, alpine glaciers are accessible and a sense of wildness is always present."

On the other side of the coin, several areas of the park have been removed from active use to preserve natural resources particularly significant to the national parks system.

In addition to the meetings, where Parks Canada representatives will be on hand to explain the proposal and record pubic views, written submissions in the form of letters or briefs are encouraged.

Copies of the proposal booklet, which includes a stamped response form, may be obtained from:

Protection of Players Key to Hockey Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sports Minister Iona Campagnolo stepped up her crusade to rid hockey of violence Tuesday with a pledge to ask provinces to work for the protection of the players.

The minister, after releasing an interim report on minor hockey in Canada by the Canadian Hockey Review committee, said the report revealed a lack of concern for amateur players.

"I'll be pleading with the provinces to work with us for the protection of the player," she told a news conference. "All provinces must work with us in this area."

The report said problems with minor amateur hockey in Canada include high costs, long schedules which leave little time for skill development, a complicated and inconsistent rule structure, recurring violence and declining participation.

The review, headed by Mr. Justice John J. Urie of the Federal Court of Canada, was established by Campagnolo in September, 1978.

Committee executive-director Larry Regan, the report's author, crisscrossed the country for eight months to conduct more than 300 interviews and about 150 meetings with hockey officials.

Campagnolo said what Regan noticed most was that "rarely was there any mention of the player. There is precious little enjoyment for the player in most areas of hockey."

The minister said the report determined that younger players were playing too many games and not getting enough instruction in developing individual skills and tactics.

Chris Lang of Toronto, secretary-treasurer of Hockey Canada, said attitudes are the greatest problem facing hockey today.

"We're taking hockey and asking kids, particularly in the significant age range of eight to 12 years, to play the way they do in the NHL," said Lang. "They have no time to develop their skills.

Lang said there are 1.2 million amateur hockey players in Canada and $500 million is spent each year on hockey in this country.

The report said hockey is the fifth most popular sport in Canada on a participation level and most popular in the 14-to-19 age group with 43 per cent of the population participating in various forms of the sport.

Statistics from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association show a steady decline in hockey enrolment during the last six years and the report said research indicates the decline results from over-competitiveness, violence, professional orientation, competing activities and adult domination.

The report recommended that the second phase of the review include an inquiry into junior hockey; a survey of players and their parents; a study of coaching; an international coaching symposium and exchange program; seminars with leading hockey experts; and a study of arena management.

Campagnolo said the committee's final report, to be completed at an unspecified date, will be the most thorough and comprehensive look at Canadian hockey.

Barnes, Heppel Pace Tally-Ho Over Labatts

John Barnes hurled a three-hitter and Keith Heppel cracked a three-run double in the third inning to help Tally-Ho to a 5-0 shutout over Labatts in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League action Tuesday night at Central Park.

John Martin tripled and scored on a groundout to provide the lone run of the first inning.

In Victoria Senior Women's League play, Strathcona Stingers nipped Bemister's Welding 4-3 and Stockers North Americans edged Butler Brothers 2-1 at Hyacinth park.

Kathy Cowles stole home to provide Stingers with the winning run and Christie Smith provided two doubles and two runs-batted-in for the victory.

Cathy Hawley allowed six hits and struck out seven to give Stockers the win while Mavis Underwood threw a four-hitter in a losing cause for Butlers. Laury Grimston hit a triple and scored both Stocker runs.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Remco Office Systems edged Victoria Athletics 5-4 in a Heywood Men's League struggle.

Unser's hot lap in his new Chaparral racer was 189.235 m.p.h. Others exceeding 180 m.p.h. so far included Johnny Rutherford, Tom Sneva, the second-place finisher here the last two years, Gordon Johncock, Sheldon Kinser, Danny Ongais and rookie Hurley Haywood.

Two Royals Are Hit and Hurt

By The Associated Press

The Royals not only lost an 8-7 American League baseball decision to the Rangers, but also lost two of their best players — Al Cowens and Frank White — when they were felled by pitches from erratic Texas starter Ed Farmer.

"I don't know what their pitching situation is, but the way he was throwing he should have been out of the ball game," said White, whose right thumb was broken by a Farmer pitch.

"I was lucky I got my hands up or he would have hit me in the face, too. They talk about knocking guys down, but after seeing what happened tonight, it isn't funny at all. It was frightening."

Cowens, taken off the field on a stretcher after Farmer broke his jaw with a pitch, was operated on at an Arlington, Tex., hospital. He was placed on the disabled list for 21 days, and White for 15 days.

"Both players were playing great," noted Kansas City manager Whitey Herzog. "You just don't replace players like that. It would be like Texas losing (Al) Oliver and (Buddy) Bell, and California losing (Rod) Carew and (Joe) Rudi."

Both White and Herzog said there was no doubt the incidents were unintentional, and Farmer said he was sorry the Royals had lost the players. He insisted that he wasn't trying to hit anyone.

Farmer, starting in the major leagues for the first time in five years, also threw a wild pitch and in one inning walked three successive batters.

In other American League games, Minnesota Twins blasted Toronto Blue Jays 16-6; California Angels routed Boston Red Sox 10-2; Milwaukee Brewers defeated Cleveland Indians 9-5; Baltimore Orioles turned back Oakland A's 8-2; Detroit Tigers outscored Chicago White Sox 10-8 and New York Yankees defeated Seattle Mariners 5-3.

Jim Kern took over for Farmer after the Ranger starter uncorked a wild pitch in the fifth that let the Royals tie the game at 7-7, and hurled one-hit ball the rest of the way.

John Ellis hit a three-run homer and Jim Sundberg a two-run smash for Texas and the Rangers scored their winning run on Gary Gray's RBI single in the bottom of the fifth.

Ken Landreaux drove in five runs and Roy Smalley and Bombo Rivera collected four RBIs apiece as Minnesota stopped Toronto in a fight-filled game. The Twins, who have won 11 of their last 13 games, trailed 6-5 before scoring six runs in the sixth and four more in the seventh.

Landreaux capped a 4-for-5 performance with an inside-the-park home run, a solo shot, in the bottom of the seventh. He also had a two-run single and a two-run double.

Both benches cleared three times as a beanball war erupted in the game and four players were ejected.

Smalley, who hit his seventh and eighth home runs of the year and was involved in the second fight of the night.

"I guess there's just times when the challenge is there," said Smalley, who was brushed back by Balor Moore in the seventh inning. "I expected him to do it. But I wished he hadn't. Things like this do nothing but detract from the game of baseball."

In the National League, Scott Sanderson tossed a one-hitter as Montreal Expos blanked San Francisco Giants 4-0.

Elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis Cardinals beat Houston Astros 4-1, Cincinnati Reds edged Chicago Cubs 8-7, Atlanta Braves defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1, Philadelphia Phillies shaded San Diego Padres 8-7 in 12 innings and Los Angeles Dodgers nipped New York Mets 3-2.

Brock Named Player-of-Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Brock, hot on the trail of the 3,000-hit plateau, was named National League baseball Player of the Week on Tuesday by league president Chub Feeney.

Brock, who last month announced he was playing his final season, had 13 hits in 21 at-bats for a .619 average and on Sunday moved within 74 hits of the magic 3,000 mark.

Wilson Nearing 'Iron Man' Record

TORONTO (CP) — There once was an Iron Man named Wilson in the National Hockey League. Johnny Wilson's accomplishments were chronicled almost daily as he approached and surpassed the record that reached 580 consecutive regular-season games.

That number has since been surpassed by St. Louis Blues veteran Garry Unger — "I think I must be nearing 900," Unger said at the recent world hockey championships in Moscow. Now another Wilson is approaching an Iron Man record.

Bruce Wilson isn't a household word in Canada, but he's hoping the ensuing publicity that comes with playing 134 consecutive regular-season games in the North American Soccer League will change that situation.

The Vancouver native hasn't missed an NASL game since joining Vancouver Whitecaps in 1974 despite the assorted bumps, bruises, contusions and lacerations that are part of the pro soccer player's daily diet.

The Chicago Sting captain, who played his 127th consecutive league game here last Sunday against Toronto Blizzard, will also be approaching 30 international appearances when the Canadian team is assembled in September.

Wilson doesn't get excited about his iron-man reputation. He recalls an international game that he didn't play, so takes nothing for granted.

"It was in Mexico, at the World Cup qualifying tournament," he said prior to the Chicago-Toronto game at Exhibition Stadium. "I had already been given a yellow card (a referee's warning) earlier in that tournament and a second one meant a game suspension.

"Funny how I got the second one," Wilson said. "Bobby Lenarduzzi (Whitecaps) made some crack at the referee. When the referee turned, Bobby did the smart thing — looked away. I happened to be looking straight at the ref and bang, I got a caution and, as a result, a suspension."

But for four minutes, Wilson would have played every minute of every game his teams have played in the NASL since he turned pro five years ago.

"It was at the end of the game," he said. "The coach took me off with four minutes to go for some reason. I was pretty much upset at the time. But so much for that.

"The consecutive game thing has becme interesting because people are starting to get interested in it. What was the game against the Blizzard, No. 127? Let's see, I can tie the record of 133 on June 6, in Portland. It doesn't mean all that much, but the publicity won't hurt."

Barring unforeseen injury, Wilson will tie the NASL record held by Roy Turner of Dallas Tornado. He is not thinking so much of the personal publicity derived from the occasion, but of the beneficial effects it will have on the cause he espouses.

As captain of Canada's national team, Wilson is admittedly a nationalist. He might have been otherwise, but it was a nationalism spawned with the Vancouver club that, at one time, had 10 Canadians among 11 starters. New management came in, with a new philosophy that Canadians can't play the game as it should be played.

And while many from that earlier Whitecaps team who drifted to other NASL franchises can appreciate the present highly-talented Vancouver team, they also feel that had the Canadian core of the club been allowed to develop much more could have been accomplished.

Wilson, however, doesn't save his barbs the for the British. Americans present a ready target, as well. He finds certain areas of U.S. dominance ludicrous since most of the top North Americans in the league (Peter Roe, Toronto; Wes McLeod, Tampa; Bob Iarusci, Washington; Tony Churski, California; Lenarduzzi, Vancouver to name a few) happen to be Canadian.

Yet they often get the short end of the shaft.

"Bobby (Lenarduzzi) won the award as the top North American player last year — kind of a miracle that a Canadian would get it — and with the award went $10,000 from a pop company," Wilson was saying. "But the sponsor pulled out because it didn't feel it could get as much publicity as with an American player.

"Bobby got $500 or something out of it. It was a joke."

Lead Grabbed By Hamburg

HAMBURG, West Germany (Reuter) — European footballer-of-the-year Kevin Keegan scored twice as Hamburg thrashed Cologne 6-0 to shoot to the top of the West German First Division on Tuesday.

With four games remaining, Hamburg has an excellent chance of finishing ahead of Stuttgart and Kaiserlautern in the title race.

Financial Winner Buys NBA Loser

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Businessman Sam Nassi, who made his fortune turning failing businesses into profitable ones, has purchased the financially-ailing Indiana Pacers of the National Basketball Association.

Nassi, 57, of Beverley Hills, Calif., said that he has no plans to change any of the Pacers front-office personnel, adding that Bob Leonard will remain as coach. He refused to reveal the purchase price, saying: "The sale price was seven figures, the high seven figures."

San Diego Sockers Drop Strike Leader

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Sockers have declined comment after releasing Mark Demling, a leader in the recent five-day players' strike in the North American Soccer League.

Demling, a member of the union's executive board, hasn't played since he criticized his coach, Hubert Vogelsinger, publicly. He declined to apologize when asked to do so.

Vogelsinger said Demling wasn't fired for taking part in the strike.

Mark Lowenstein, a spokesman for the players' association, said an unfair labor practices suit will be filed on behalf of Demling.

Suns Burn Sonic Defence

And, it appears to be working as the Suns pulled off a 100-91 victory Tuesday night before a sellout crowd of 12,660 at Veterans Memorial Coliseum. The victory squared their best-of-seven National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series at 2-2 and the two teams will meet again Friday night in Seattle.

"The holes are there because they double-team Paul (Westphal) and Walter (Davis)," said Suns coach John MacLeod. "To crack that defence, you have to pass. You have got to have enough control to do it. You have to have the poise. The holes are there and it's a matter of finding them."

The Suns capitalized on that strategy in the closing minutes of the third quarter and the opening six minutes of the final period.

Davis led the Suns' scoring punch with 27 points, including 15 points in the second half. Suns reserve guard Ted McClain bolstered the attackwith 12 points, including six in the final period.

The Suns, who had held a 15-point lead at one time in the second quarter, found themselves trailing 69-67 with 5:49 left in the third quarter. The SuperSonics, down 58-50 at halftime, had managed to go ahead on a scoring run led by Gus Williams, who got eight of his 22 points in that stretch, and by John Johnson, who picked up six points in that spurt.

The Suns, however, bounced back to score the next three baskets and then ran up an 81-77 lead going into the final quarter.

The Suns came out in the final period and collected six unanswered baskets to take a 16-point lead, 93-77. McClain, a 6-foot-3 guard, led the outburst, scoring on an eight-footer, a baseline shot and a layup.

Paul Westphal, who had 21 points, picked up two of the buckets while Davis added a third.

Racing's Fourth Richest, Exceller Retired to Stud

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Exceller, the fourth richest thoroughbred in racing history, has been retired and will be sent to stud duty in Kentucky, trainer Charlie Whittingham announced Tuesday.

Exceller, winner of $1,654,003 in his career, suffered a small crack in the coffin bone (arch) of his left front leg during the running of the Century Handicap on April 29 at Hollywood Park. Owners Nelson Bunker Hunt and Herbert Schnapka had been undecided since then whether or not to race him again.

Exceller, who finished third in the Century despite the break, was fitted with a special shoe the following morning and has been walking soundly since.

"The owners decided that he was too valuable as a sire to try and race him again, although his foot is improving every day," said Whittingham. "If he were a horse of less value, we probably would go on with him."

Guenther Gets Two Victories

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Rob Guenther collected both victories Tuesday as Victoria Budgets swept an exhibition men's softball doubleheader 6-2 in 11 innings and 3-0 over Phoenix Schaeffer-Smith.

A bases-loaded single by Rob Walton after three walks around an infield out and a two-run homer by John Green broke open the opening game in which Guenther took over as pitcher in the 10th inning. Cliff Bishop started and was replaced by Dave Ruthowsky in the seventh.

Guenther then went the distance in the second game allowing five hits. All the Budgets runs were unearned.

Budgets played errorless ball in both games.

Cougars Affiliate With Alberta Club

Victoria Cougars will have an Alberta connection during the next Western Hockey League season.

Manager-coach Jack Shupe said Tuesday that Cougars will be affiliated with Sherwood Park Crusaders of the Alberta Junior League as well as Nanaimo Clippers of the British Columbia Junior League.

"We had problems last year with some Alberta players refusing to go to Nanaimo," said Shupe, "so the agreement with the Crusaders gives us a Tier Two club in both provinces. It's hard to ask a 17-year-old player from Edmonton to go to Nanaimo and finish his high school studies. We would rather have him play nearer his home town then move here for two seasons."

Liverpool Collects 11th Soccer Title

LONDON (Reuter) — Liverpool finally clinched the English soccer championship Tuesday when it swept to a commanding 3-0 victory over Aston Villa.

It was the third time in four years that manager Bob Paisley has steered Liverpool to the title.

Fullback Alan Kennedy shot his team ahead after only 47 seconds to the delight of the 50,000 home fans, and leading scorer Kennt Dalglish made it 2-0 before half time.

West Bromwich Albion, who with former champions Nottingham Forest had led the chase to stop Liverpool, beat Southampton 1-0 with a goal from Ally Brown, but must now be content with fighting for runners-up spot against Forest.

It was Liverpool's 11th championship win — an English record — and its seventh title success since the Second World War.

Fans invaded the pitch and fighting broke out among the players when Sheffield United was relegated to the Third Division for the first time in its 90-year history.

Aussie Players Shock U.S. Team

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (Reuter) — The United States, favorites to win the men's Nations Cup team tennis tournament, suffered a severe setback Tuesday against Australia.

Australia's John Alexander beat former Wimbledon singles champion Arthur Ashe 6-3, 6-7, 6-4, and Eddie Dibbs was outplayed by Kim Warwick who won 6-2, 6-2, to give the Australians a 2-0 lead.

The doubles was unfinished, with both teams having won a set.

In the other group B tie, West Germany surprisingly defeated Mexico 2-1. West German Uli Pinner gave the Germans a 1-0 lead, beating Raul Ramirez.

After losing the first set 5-7, Ramirez hit back to take the second 6-4, but in an exciting third set, Pinner broke through to take a 6-5 lead and finished the match decisively with a winning volley off an attempted cross-court passing shot.

Pinner's team-mate Rolf Gehring easily beat Emilio Montano of Mexico 7-6, 6-3 to clinch the tie.

Tarkenton Quits Grid To Share ABC Mike

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — One of the top quarterbacks in the National Football League officially retired Tuesday, but life must go on for Minnesota Vikings, the team Fran Tarkenton leaves behind.

"That's the unique thing about sports," said Minnesota coach Bud Grant. "There are no eras, only the next game. You can't dwell on what's past."

But Tarkenton, the son of a preacher man whom Grant said had no peers as a quarterback, left behind a legacy full of memories which Minnesota fans will not soon forget.

"There will be only one Fran Tarkenton in this world," said a Minnesota man. Tarkenton, in deciding to call it quits, signed a multi-year contract with ABC Sports. He now will confine his scrambling to the broadcast booth between Frank Gifford and Howard Cosell on the network's Monday Night Football telecasts. Tarkenton will do six regular-season games, spelling off Don Meredith.

Tarkenton set six NFL records for quarterbacks in his 18 seasons — most yards passing, 47,003; most total passes, 6,467; most completions, 3,686; most touchdown passes, 342; most yards rushing, 3,674, and most seasons passing for at least 2,000 yards, 16.

Among Tarkenton's greatest supporters was Grant.

"In many cases, the great get greater," Grant said. "Francis was like that. He was still going strong last year, doing everything he had to do at age 38.

"You certainly are appreciative of all your players," Grant said. "But we've had a lot of success here and Francis was a part of most of it."

Tennis Tour For Women Gets Richer

NEW YORK (AP) — The women's winter tennis tour will be richer next year with more than $1.8 million available.

A $300,000 championship at Madison Square Garden will highlight the 11-stop tour, which is expected to feature the world's best women players. The championship event will take place March 17-23 and will include showdowns for the singles and doubles titles of the tour.

The circuit opens Jan. 8-13 in Cincinnati, one of two new stops on the tour. The other new tournament will be in Kansas City the following week.

Priestner Bids For Colts Job

HAMILTON (CP) — Linebacker John Priestner says he hopes to start his professional football career with Baltimore Colts but he's not burning any bridges on his way to the National Football League.

Priestner has been offered a contract with the Canadian Football League Hamilton Tiger-Cats but expects he can get a better deal with the Colts who picked him in the 11th round of last week's NFL draft.

"I guess Hamilton is limited in their budget and it definitely can't compete with the NFL," said Priestner, an all-star with University of Western Ontario Mustangs and the outstanding Canadian player of the game in this year's Can-Am Bowl game in Florida.

"But I still have a lot of respect for the Hamilton organization. I don't want to say any more because I want to leave amicably."

Priestner, a 20-year-old Burlington, Ont., native, said the Colts start training camp in July. If he can't gain a position on the NFL club's roster, he remains Hamilton property.

Priestner, 6-foot-2 and 225 pounds, would be only the third Canadian to join an NFL club after being drafted from a Canadian college. Others were wide receiver Jim Young, drafted from Queen's University by Minnesota Vikings, and Bryan Fryer, another reciever picked from University of Alberta by Washington Redskins. Both Young and Fryer later returned to the CFL.

Revamped Khomeini Militia Worries Iranian Dissidents

By WILLIAM BRANIGIN

TEHRAN (WP) — The military arm of Iran's secret Revolutionary Council said it hopes to spread the Islamic revolution abroad and combat armed opponents of the Ayatollah Khomeini's government at home.

The statement by the command headquarters of the Army of the Guardians of the Islamic Revolution" was greeted with apprehension at the weekend by Iranian liberals and leftists, who fear the militia eventually may be used to crush dissidents critical of Iran's strict Islamic system.

The communique again raised questions about who is going to have final say in post-revolutionary Iran, the clergymen of Khomeini's Revolutionary Council or the civilian and more liberal government of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan.

The declaration appeared to contradict a statement by Bazargan only last week that such revolutionary organizations will be dissolved along with the installation of a permanent elected government.

On orders from Khomeini, the Revolutionary Council announced formal establishment of the guards under its direct control.

Some observers linked this with increasingly strident anti-Communist statements from the Khomeini camp since the assassination last Tuesday of Ayatollah Morteza Motahari, a key Khomeini aide and Revolutionary Council member.

The announcement said the council had appointed a command staff whose membership was not revealed. The Revolutionary Guards first were formed in February after the insurrection that overthrew Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. They have not been as well organized as Marxist and radical Islamic guerrilla groups and their purpose and command structure never were clearly defined.

The latest declaration appeared to signal an effort to change all that and set up an armed force designed to execute the orders of Khomeini and his mysterious Revolutionary Council.

It said the duty of the new army would be to "protect the revolution in Iran and spread it in the world on the basis of genuine Islamic ideology."

It also said the organization would "support just liberation movements of the impoverished masses of the world under the leadership of the revolution and in consultation with the government."

In addition, the force is charged with helping maintain internal security, fight counter-revolutionaries, defend against foreign aggression, carry out the orders of Islamic revolutionary courts and help provide "moral, ideological and military training" for army officers.

The declaration said the guards would "wage armed struggle against those who attempt armed struggles against Islam."

In what was interpreted as a thinly veiled warning to Iranian leftists — blamed by many Khomeini followers for the slaying of Motahari — a senior figure in the ayatollah's entourage said the clergy was the only force restraining Iran's vast Islamic majority from attacking the leftists.

Another religious leader put it even more bluntly. "Just as we destroyed the giants of Western imperialism," he said, "we will destroy communism, Zionism and any other 'ism' which is against Islam."

The pro-Moscow Tudeh Communist party reacted by denying it had anything to do with the assassination of Motahari and charging that the rightists were taking avantage of the incident to stir up anti-Communist sentiment.

Although the guards' charter spoke of an international role, political observers here said the force probably would have its hands full trying to enforce its orders in Iran, given the diverse armed groups and the threat of further political assassinations.

It was not immediately clear how large a force the revolutionary guard will be. Tehran newspapers estimated the organization has about 6,000 militiamen.

In an interview, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, head of National Iranian Radio and Television and a close Khomeini aide, said the guard has a "very important role because of the lack of reorganization in the armed forces." He said the force is "meant to be a supplementary" to the regular army and is "definitely ideologically oriented."

Ghotbzadh said the revolutionary guard would be a permanent force under direct authority of the Revolutionary Council and later would be placed under the joint control of the council and the government once an elected administration is installed.

Contradicting a statement by Bazargan in an earlier interview, Ghotbzadeh said, "After the election the Revolutionary Council should exist but its role should be one of guidance."

Bazargan had said the council would be dissolved and replaced by an elected parliament when power is transferred to a permanent government.

Ghotbzadeh is widely believed to be a member of the council. In the interview he would neither confirm nor deny this.

He said the militiamen of Khomeini's much-criticized revolutioary committees would be partly absorbed by the revolutionary guard and partly integrated into the country's economy. He confirmed that the committees are to be disbanded, possibly even before the installation of an elected government.

Italian Terror Blame Levelled at U.S.S.R.

ROME (AP) — The former head of Italy's security and intelligence service charged Tuesday that the Soviet KGB secret police created a special office to foment Communist subversion in Western Europe and is at the root of new terrorist activity in Italy.

Gen. Vito Miceli, now a senator for the neo-Fascist National Social Movement party, told a press conference the new branch specializes in funding terrorist actions in Italy.

The press conference marked the Italian election campaign kickoff of the small but vocal movement, which polled 6.1 per cent of the vote in the last general election in 1976.

"In our view, terrorism is piloted by the KGB and the Soviet Union," Miceli said of Italian terrorists. "We are facing kamikazes, ready for death in order to achieve their aims."

Asked about the development of right-wing terrorism, the secretary of the party, Giorgio Almirante, told the conference: "There is no other terrorism except Soviet terrorism."

Opening lead - ten of hearts.

To be a top-notch declarer you must live in a constant state of fear! You should hope for the best but prepare for the worst. Assume you're in six spades and West leads a heart. At once it is obvious there are no red suit losers and that the only possible losers are a club and either one or two trump tricks.

You win the heart and the question is what to do next. You can take the club finesse and then tackle trumps, or tackle trumps and then take the club finesse. It may seem like a case of six of these or half a dozen of those, but actually the proper order of plays is to lead a club first.

Let's go to the actual hand and see what happens when you try the club finesse at trick two. It wins and now you have a sure thing, since the only problem that remains is to protect against a 4-0 trump division.

You lead the king of trumps, thus guarding against four trumps in either opponent's hand. As it happens, East shows out and it is easy to restrict yourself to one trump loser. Had West shown out, you would also have lost only one trick by playing a low trump to the ace and a trump back.

Now let's assume you had decided to tackle trumps before attempting the club finesse. In that case you would follow the normal procedure of leading a low trump to the ace, and all your hopes and expectations would suddenly go kerplunk.

But that would be the wrong way to play the hand — and readers of this column are not expected to do the wrong thing!

"Betty?" said Bob. "She's fine, but why do you ask?"

Stan smiled. "I met her ten years ago, when you figured your age was three times the square of hers. Remember?

"Not really, but we'll update it for you," Bob told him. "A year ago I was three times her age."

Love Canal, N.Y. Breeding Hatred

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — From her living-room window, Marie Pozniak gazes out at rows of abandoned houses nearby. For her and hundreds of others, the sight is a daily and haunting reminder of the grim reality nearby — the chemical disaster known as Love Canal.

Mrs. Pozniak and about 500 others were left behind in the modest neighborhood when the state evacuated their neighbors nearest the dump after it was decided their health was endangered by the chemicals. She and many of the others feel cheated and trapped.

Cheated, because they believe Gov. Hugh Carey's evacuation of 239 residents last summer was simply a campaign gesture — one that left them behind and their own and their loved ones' lives endangered.

Trapped, because no one will buy their homes — houses that have potentially dangerous chemicals leaching through basement walls.

"State officials warned us not to grow a garden," Mrs. Pozniak remarked recently. "We can grow our children here but we can't grow a garden here. That absolutely blows my mind. It's horrible."

For more than 10 years, the Hooker Plastics and Chemical Corp. dumped a total of more than 80 different chemicals into the site of the never-opened canal. The state's evacuation of the immediate area was prompted by studies that showed a high rate of miscarriage and birth defects in the area possibly linked to the leaching chemicals.

Mrs. Poziak's family is one of many in the periphery area with serious medical problems. And she, like many of the others, feels the chemicals are the cause.

Although the state offers limited financial assistance to perhaps as many as 130 families in the periphery area to help them relocate temporarily, only those with children under two or pregnant women are eligible. The state's stand is that studies thus far have not justified further evacuations.

But the homeowners say their own informal study shows a much higher rate of disease. A cancer researcher from Buffalo's Roswell Park Memorial Cancer Centre agrees.

Dr. Beverly Paigen, who recently urged evacuating most of those left behind, contends that many of the homeowners are reluctant to state such things as neurological disorders or mental illness on the survey forms the state health department distributed.

"There was a definite elevation of certain diseases," she said in an interview. "And there was a definite pattern — the diseases were more concentrated along the old stream beds (or swales). I put forth the hypothesis that chemicals were migrating along paths of the old streambeds and getting into houses.

The state agrees that the chemicals pose a potential health threat to fetuses and children under two.

It also agrees that there have been higher rates of miscarriages and birth defects in the swale areas but it said studies thus far indicate no threat to the general population.

Dr. David Axelrod, the state health commissioner, said the department understands the concern of the residents left behind. But he adds that he will recommend no further evacuations unless studies link the chemicals to certain diseases.

Jim Clark — an admittedly bitter man whose family has been plagued with medical problems and whose yard is littered with signs like one reading "Welcome to Chemical City" — is one resident who feels there is no need for scientific studies.

"My kidney just solidified and quit functioning," he said.

"My four kids all display hyperactivity. We have three members of the family now who have skin problems. My one son quit growing at 12, developed an ulcer at 15 and he's an acute diabetic. My wife has cardiovascular problems and just everybody feels generally rotten."

"You can't prove any of this stuff," he concedes but adds: "To me it's obvious it was the chemicals."

Lois Gibbs, president of a homeowners group that oversaw Dr. Paigen's survey, criticized the methods the state used in investigating health problems in the area.

"When we did our survey we sat down and talked to the individual resident on a one-to-one basis," she said. "What the health department did is they came out, knocked on the door, said 'Mr. Clark, here's your 22-page survey, fill it out. We'll be back after dinner to pick it up.' "

NOT MUCH REMAINS of this Tampa, Fla., auto repair shop after tornadoes raked the Tampa Bay area Tuesday and spread across the state's midsection as far as Daytona Beach. Onlookers survey the rubble from the gusting storm which toppled concrete blocks, overturned trailers in two nearby mobile home parks, felled trees and power lines. The storm also tore away carports and flooded intersections where cars by the dozens were left stranded in 12 to 18 inches of water. At least one school sent youngsters home early because classrooms were flooded. By the end of the day officials were still trying to arrive at an estimate of damage.

New Approach To Snakebites

MELBOURNE, Australia (CP) — Researchers at the Commonwealth Serum Laboratories have developed a new first aid technique for snakebite victims, substituting a simple procedure for the usual application of a tourniquet to the limb above the bite.

The new method involves wrapping a firm cloth bandage around the bitten limb directly over the bite, and immobilizing the limb with a splint.

It was discovered that combination of firm pressure over the bite and keeping the limb as still as possible delayed movement of the venom through the body.

Radar Traps Ruled Out As Unreliable in Florida

★ But Canada Keeps Them

TORONTO (CP) — Radar devices criticized during the recent court case in Florida will continue to be used to locate speeding motor vehicles in Ontario, a police spokesman said Tuesday.

J. S. Kay, assistant commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police traffic division, said the force's 160 stationary and moving radar units must meet Ontario Provincial Police specifications.

Kay said the manufacturers train OPP officers in radar operating procedures and added that if a unit malfunctions, it is taken out of sevice immediately.

Kay said the OPP has been using radar units since 1954 and their accuracy has been upheld by the courts.

And in Victoria, an RCMP spokesman said the type of radar problems which sparked the court case in Florida don't exist here.

He said officers are trained to use radar readings primarily as a means of corroborating visually-evaluated speeds.

He said the equipment used in B.C. differs from that in Dade County and has been thoroughly tested at the RCMP laboratory in Ottawa prior to use.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A Dade County judge has ruled that radar measurement of traffic speed isn't reliable enough for court evidence, and Dale Smith, who manufactures radar-detection equipment, says he couldn't be happier, even if he loses business.

State Attorney Janet Reno said she would decide today whether to appeal Monday's decision by Judge Alfred Nesbitt. If the decision is upheld, it might have an impact beyond Dade County and the 80 accused speeders directly involved.

Smith, who founded an Ohio firm that manufactures radar detection devices known as Fuzzbusters, attended the hearing and said he helped pay fees and expenses for defence witnesses. He said he doesn't care if the blow to radar cuts his company's sales.

"I don't think we'll sell many Fuzzbusters in Dade County," said Smith. "I don't think this is going to affect our business in the rest of the country, but I don't care if it does."

Smith said that when a driver with a radar detector is caught in a speed trap, he knows he hasn't violated the law but "runs into a stone wall" of false evidence.

"I just got teed off," he said. "Judge Nesbitt offered a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, and that's why I'm here."

Lawyers on both sides of the case said the impact of Nesbitt's ruling may not be confined to the Miami area, where 5,000 speeding cases were held up during the hearing.

"Very likely the ramifications will be felt elsewhere in Florida and the nation," said Public Defender Bennett Brummer. "I think it would be difficult for other judges not to follow his decision."

Nesbitt said other judges are not bound by law to consider his ruling, and radar has been declared acceptable in eight states.

Unless the ruling is upheld by a higher court, its legal scope is limited to 80 accused speeders who asked that radar evidence be suppressed, or who asked to join the case. If appealed all the way to the Florida Supreme Court and upheld there, all judges in the state would have to follow the ruling.

The issue arose when Nesbitt viewed a television broadcast which appeared to show radar units clocking a tree at 137 kilometres an hour and a house at 44 kilometres an hour. Experts testified that errors in clocking can be caused by telephone-paging devices, two-way radios or people whistling into citizens-band radio microphones.

Prosecutors did not dispute contentions that both equipment and police training might be improved, but argued that radar serves the public good as a law-enforcement tool.

Nesbitt did not rule out the use of radar in the future, saying he thought manufacturers could make it more dependable.

Drilling Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Phoenix Canada Oil Co. Ltd. of Toronto plans to start production shortly at a 109,000-acre property in Nigeria. Plans call for initial production of about 4,000 barrels a day of light crude.

Estuary Plant Still Alive

DUNCAN — Industrial development will go ahead on the Cowichan estuary despite a recent announcement by Island Shake and Shingle of a $5 million expansion program at Lake Cowichan.

The firm plans to go ahead with a $5 million shake and shingle plant on estuary land adjacent to the Doman Industries sawmill, ISS president Bert Rodenbush said.

Nor has ISS shelved plans for a shingle mill at Cowichan Bay, he added.

Rodebush said the estuary plant would provide 175 new jobs.

Still No Clues In Moro Death A Year Later

ROME (Reuter) — Former Premier Aldo Moro was murdered one year ago today, but no one knows for sure who killed the respected elder statesman and Italy still lives in the shadow of the guerrillas' guns.

The anniversary of Moro's death was marked by ceremonies throughout the country as Italians recalled the moment his body was found in a car in central Rome. The discovery ended 55 days of drama and tragedy perhaps unparalleled in post-war Italy.

"A year has passed since that terrible day," said Benigno Zaccagnini, the secretary of Moro's Christian Democrat Party. "And yet for us today is still May 9, 1978. The wound has not healed, and the emptiness has not been filled."

Moro, five times Italy's prime minister, was found in the trunk of a Renault with 11 bullets in his chest.

Moro was kidnapped on March 16, 1978, in Via Fani, not far from his home in northern Rome. Despite the existing terrorist threat, his car and those of his guards were not bullet proof.

His abductors killed his five-man escort and dragged Moro into a waiting car, breaking several of his ribs as they did so.

Then began a stream of communications from the Red Brigades, the longest-lived and evidently best-organized of Italy's mushrooming urban guerrilla groups.

One of these contained a specific condition for the politician's release: freedom for urban guerrillas already in jail, including Renato Curcio, founder of the Red Brigades.

Meanwhile a stream of letters from Moro to friends, family and political colleagues began, seeking to arrange some formula for a prisoner exchange.

The Red Brigades announced the result of a "people's trial," condemning Moro to death. But few people really believed them.

Even after May 5, when a final communique announced: "We conclude the battle begun on March 16 by executing the sentence," hope for Aldo Moro's life continued for three days more, before an anonymous caller told Moro's family where the body could be found.

The government observed the last wishes of Aldo Moro by which, feeling himself abandoned, he demanded that "no member of the state or of my party take part in my funeral."

For the Red Brigades, their blow at the heart of the state was meant to create a pre-revolutionary atmosphere of alarm and despondency. In this it failed.

In the last month a series of police raids have picked up guerrillas who may have made the telephone calls.

Some 40 Red Brigades members are under arrest in connection with the murder but none has been brought to trial.

Nobody knows for certain who planned the kidnapping nor who took part in it. Nobody knows where Moro was held prisoner, nor where he was killed, nor on whose orders.

Menacing Mountain 'Alive'

MALIBU, Calif. (UPI) — A crumbling mountainside inching toward the ocean and a row of beachfront homes blocked the Pacific Coast Highway again today, and geologists warned that an avalanche may be imminent.

"The mountain is obviously alive," said Jerry Russell, maintenance chief for the California Department of Transportation.

"A few geologists are predicting that large portions of the mountain may fall off any time and, well — splat!"

The road — closed for more than three weeks — had been open only two days Tuesday when the slope again began shedding 150 tons of earth, rock and boulders onto the highway below.

With new rumblings detected deep inside the bluff, Caltrans again closed the highway.

Closure of the five-mile section of the highway, between Topanga Canyon Boulevard and Malibu Canyon Road, has forced an estimated 30,000 commuters to detour through long, winding canyon roads, adding nearly an hour to the usual 30-minute ride. A handful have taken advantage of a water taxi instituted by Caltrans.

The mountain inched steadily toward the sea for weeks but last week remained relatively stable, prompting Sunday's reopening of the highway. By Tuesday afternoon, however, fissures had widened dramatically throughout the 500-foot slide area and downhill movement of the bluff was measured at two inches.

The five residents living at the base of the deteriorating mountain are ignoring the danger and staying in their homes. Most blame the new slide activity on vibrations caused by heavy trucks.

Chairman Mao's Ghost Still a Towering Force

By JAY MATHEWS

PEKING (WP) — Even in death, Mao Tse-tung still draws a crowd in Tienanmen Square. Thousands of Chinese and a few Americans lined up to file into his huge memorial hall and have a five-second look at his pasty, deeply lined features, preserved under glass.

A just ended, mysterious four-month closing of the hall, and three years of rapid change in China since his death, have not quenched the Chinese fascination with this man. This has killed hopes of a solution to an unending problem for China's new government, trying to rid itself of the painful remnants of Mao's wilder social schemes.

After months of alternatively scolding and embracing Mao's ghost, his less charismatic successors apparently have decided to live with him.

Communist Party propagandists are trying to blot out memories of Mao in his last years, hitting out at all elites, including party veterans like themselves, and insisting on a nation run by spiritual fervor, not self-interest. China's new leaders want to remember the Mao of the 1930s, 1940s, and 1950s, cautious, pragmatic, not so hurried by knowledge of approaching death, approving policies not on ideological grounds but because they worked.

Whatever Mao himself might have wanted for the China following his death, and his ironic turn of mind refused to make this clear, his surviving writings provide fuel for all possible factions of the new communist leadership. This leaves the style of his memory a nagging source of debate and an extremely important factor in China's future.

Young couples on their wedding day still turn to the portrait of Mao on the wall and bow. A picture of Mao's handpicked successor, Chairman Hua Guo-feng, is sometimes there, too, but there are not similar posters in circulation showing the leader of the somewhat anti-Maoist group now in control here — Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping).

A walk into the "Chairman Mao Memorial Hall" as inscribed over the door in Hua's handwriting, goes quickly, without a sound. The building is big and square with graceful pillars that make it resemble the Kennedy Center in Washington. Chinese and other visitors enter four abreast, then go left or right, two abreast, to walk around a huge painted screen with a statue of Mao in front of it.

Air conditioning chills the red carpeted room where stands the bier, surrounded by apparently plastic flowers (no one dares touch them.) Mao's body lies face up, dressed in a grey suit of the style that took his name. He is completely wrapped in a bright red Chinese flag below the chest. The skin seems old but lifelike, but there is little time to stare. No one speaks or stops moving.

Outside again, Westerners occasionally will joke about the "peasant under glass," but the Chinese do not laugh or smile. They have seen the man who united them, who made his name synonymous with China and with some of mankind's great social experiments. Even if they do not love him, they are proud of him.

This respect and fascination survives despite all the painful memories in China today of Mao's destructive impulses. The wallposter walls are full of appeals by unlucky officials who lost homes, jobs and self-respect in one of the great Mao purges and have yet to get them back. Western scientists visiting here find a young generation of technological illiterates, forced for years to plant rice and forsake the book learning Mao so suspected.

When Mao died in September 1976, and his entourage quickly removed from power by a group of veteran officials, the official press began to suggest gently that he may not have been right all the time, and that new answers had to be found to China's new problems. When wallposter attacks on Mao became heated last year, however, Deng cooled them down out of fear for the legitimacy of a Communist regime Mao created.

Iran Execution Toll Reaches 199

TEHRAN (AP) — Islamic firing squads executed eight more men early today, including a leading Jewish businessman accused of "contact with Israel and Zionism," the official Radio Tehran announced.

Today's executions, along with 21 Tuesday, brought to 199 the number of persons put to death since Ayatollah Khomeini's forces toppled the government of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February.

Among the latest group was Habib Elghanian, who held controlling interests in a large number of companies and was a prominent member of Iran's Jewish community.

The broadcast said he was accused of "corruption and contact with Israel and Zionism and betrayal of his fellow citizens."

"His properties were confiscated for the weak people," the broadcast said.

Iran's new revolutionary government has taken a militant anti-Israeli stance and, when former prime minister Amir Abbas Hoveida was executed April 7, working for international Zionism was one of the charges against him. Although Iran is not an Arab country, it has a large Arab minority which supplies much of the work force in the vital oil industry.

A prominent Moslem industrialist, Rahim Ali Khorram, also was executed today. The official Pars news agency described him as a "famous merchant and the owner of some casinos and gambling houses." Islam is opposed to gambling. His property also was seized.

Another of those executed was Dr. Abol-Hassan Saadatmand, a former information minister who also served as a senior member of the shah's Savak secret police and the armed forces. He became a Savak deputy brigadier in 1964 and an army major-general in 1968.

Pars said Sadaatmand, who was information minister under martial law Prime Minister Gholam-Reza Azhari, was formerly head of public relations for the army.

Also executed by firing squads in Tehran were Dr. Mohammad Baghi Yazdi, a Savak physician alleged to have specialized in torture, and Savak agents Mohammad Fallah and Jafar Shokravi.

In Fars province in the south, a former police corporal, Abdollah Majidi, was executed on charges of shooting at people and corruption, the radio said. However, the court decided his salary should continue to be paid to his family.

A policeman, Ahmad Ibrahimi, was executed in the Caspian port city of Rasht after being convicted of killing an anti-shah demonstrator.

A Tehran rabbi, who asked not to be identified, said he had no indication that Elghanian's execution was the start of an anti-Jewish purge. Khomeini has said that all religious minorities, including Iran's estimated 75,000 Jews, will have freedom of worship under an Islamic republic.

Auto Council Cries 'Foul'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Automotive Information Council says Transportation Secretary Brock Adams went way too far in lambasting the auto repair industry on the basis of work done on 62 cars.

Adams said the department's repair experiment — sending cars fixed to malfunction to 62 randomly selected garages — indicated a motorist has about a 50-50 chance of getting poor service or being overcharged when he has his car repaired.

Adams should not "indict the entire automotive service repair industry" on that limited evidence, the auto council said in a statement Tuesday at its Southfield, Mich., headquarters.

"With more than 100 million passenger cars on the road and 300,000 repair facilities, such a miniscule sampling can hardly be considered valid as even an amateur survey."

Dime Store Inferno Toll Reaches 10

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Fire turned the five-storey Woolworth variety store in this Midlands industrial city into a raging inferno during business hours Tuesday afternoon, killing at least 10 persons, police reported.

They said more than 50 were admitted to hospital, some in serious condition.

Scores of shoppers and clerks ran into the street from the basement and main floor.

About 20 persons fled to the roof and were brought down ladders by firemen.

A fleet of 18 ambulances took the dead and injured to three nearby hospitals. More than 100 firemen fought the blaze.

A fire department spokesman said the bodies of six women and four men have been recovered. As night fell, firemen equipped wih breathing apparatus searched for more victims.

Witnesses said about 12 women were trapped behind barred windows of a cashier's office on the second floor but firemen broke the bars loose and rescued them. Ladder crews saved salesman Gerald Richardson, who had crawled out on a narrow ledge about 20 metres above the street to escape the scorching heat and smoke.

A man who tried to help the women trapped in the office on the second floor, told reporters: "Arms and legs were sticking through the bars as they tried to get out."

He said there were "a dozen or more women . . . they were all screaming."

He added: "Some of the girls were cut as they smashed windows to call for help. Blood dripped onto the yellow helmets of firemen below.

"They had a hell of a job but eventually shifted one or two bars and brought the girls to safety."

Richardson, 44, said he tried to escape to a lower floor, but "the smoke got thicker and thicker and I was trapped."

He said: "I ran back upstairs, smashed a window and climbed out on to a ledge 50 feet (about 20 metres) above the pavement. I was rescued by firemen using a ladder."

The fire broke out at 1:30 p.m. in the second-floor furniture department.

Fire department officials said they have not determined the cause of the blaze but there is nothing to indicate suspicious orgins.

A Woolworth spokesman said he does not know how many shoppers were in the store but there were about 150 diners in the restaurant and at least 150 employees on duty. He said all staff members have been accounted for.

Big Telescope Breakthrough

TUCSON, Ariz. (Reuter) — A new six-mirrored telescope, third largest in the world and one which scientists say is a breakthrough rivalling the inventions of Galileo, was dedicated here today.

The $9-million telescope stands on top of the 2.8-kilometre high summit of Mount Hopkins, about 56 kilometres south of Tucson.

Designed to study distant galaxies, the project is expected to open the way to a new generation of multiple mirror telescopes larger than any now in use.

Conventional telescopes use only one large mirror. But as their size and power increased the mirrors became too large to make, polish and aim.

Today's formal dedication ceremony of the Multiple Mirror Telescope (MMT) caps a 10-year effort by U.S. scientists. The week-long celebrations include speeches by internationally known astrophysicists.

The only larger optical telescopes are the 5-metre Hale Reflector on Mount Palomar in Los Angeles and a 5.9-metre telescope in the Crimea in the southwest of the Soviet Union.

Vampire, 28 Convicted

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Richard Trenton Chase, who admitted drinking the blood of at least one of his victims, was convicted Tuesday of first-degree murder in the brutal slayings of six people, including a pregnant woman and a baby boy.

A Superior Court jury of nine women and three men deliberated six hours over a two-day period before returning the guilty verdict, which is subject to the death penalty. Chase, 28, pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Judge John Schatz set Monday for the sanity phase of the trial. If Chase if found sane, the panel must then decide if he should be given the death penalty.

Chase showed no emotion as each of the six counts of guilty was read. His mother watched from a courtroom seat.

Chase was charged with committing the murders in Sacramento in December 1977 and January 1978. The killngs were described by Sacramento County Sheriff Duane Lowe as "the most grotesque slayings" he had seen in 28 years of police work.

Five of the victims — murdered between Jan. 23 and Jan. 27, 1978 — were shot and extensively slashed. They were Teresa Lynn Wallin, 23; Daniel James Merideth, 52; Evelyn Miroth, 36; her son Jason, 6; and her nephew, David Ferreira, 22 months.

He also was charged with killing Ambrose Griffin, 51, as he stood unloading groceries in the driveway of his home on Dec. 29, 1977.

Spears of Spring

cooking with kay

By KAY SPICER

The special delectability of spring, green asparagus has added to man's eating enjoyment for more than 2,000 years. Today fresh asparagus is a universal favorite and the choice of connoisseurs.

But who was the first to discover asparagus? That's a question that has stimulated conjecture ever since these vitamin-rich spears were found growing wild in so many different places.

We know the ancient Greeks were very fond of asparagus. But we can thank the Romans for recording detailed instructions on how to grow asparagus, and their gardening hints are still valuable today.

Along with utterly superb taste, the sleek, slender stalks have an added flourish of vitamins C and A. Fresh asparagus is quick and easy to prepare and wonderfully adaptable hot or cold. Buy firm, compact-tipped stalks.

If you are a busy hostess, you will welcome the convenient casserole that sparkles with layers of fresh asparagus spears among ground beef, pungent onions and tasty tomatoes. It's a spring scene-stealer bound for triumph at a luncheon or supper party.

Today's Asparagus-Cottage Cheese Salad recipe provides you with an opportunity to turn out a creation that would please any Roman epicure.

ASPARAGUS COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD

(Makes 6 servings)

- 2 pounds fresh asparagus
- ⅔ cup vegetable oil
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons chopped chives or 1 teaspoon freeze dried chives
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 500 g cottage cheese
- Pimiento strips, optional

Break off the asparagus stalks as far down as they snap easily. Wash asparagus and cook, covered, in a small amount of salted boiling water, 8 to 10 minutes or until just tender. Drain, if necessary.

Place asparagus in a shallow dish. Combine the oil, vinegar, lemon juice, chives, salt, sugar, and pepper, and pour over asparagus. Cover and refrigerate at least one hour, turning occasionally.

Just before serving, arrange the asparagus on a platter. Add two tablespoons marinade to cottage cheese; pile in centre of asparagus. Garnish with pimiento strips if desire.

FRESH ASPARAGUS SUPPER CASSEROLE

(4 to 6 servings)

- 1 bunch fresh asparagus (about 2½ pounds)
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 2 medium-sized tomatoes, coarsely chopped
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh onion
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups crushed crisp cracker crumbs
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Break off asparagus stalks as far down as they snap easily. Cook asparagus in a small amount boiling salted water in covered skillet or saucepan 7 to 10 minutes or until just tender. Drain, if necessary.

Brown ground beef in oil over medium heat stirring occasionally. Stir in tomatoes, onion, salt and pepper. Simmer, uncovered, 5 minutes. Cover bottom of 8x12-inch baking dish with ½ cup crumbs.

Arrange asparagus and meat mixture evenly over crumbs. Top with remaining crumbs. Dot butter or margarine over ingredients in baking dish. Bake in 425° F. oven 15 minutes, or until thoroughly heated.

Beat Those Meat and Fish Costs

hilda beastall

Meat costs and fish costs are increasing again as noted in a recent report, but we shall still eat well if prepared to use substitute protein dishes for the meat and fish protein in some meals each week.

This is no new idea. It was worked out years ago during real shortages owing to national conditions. Beans, rice and dried peas, macaroni or spaghetti with milk products were recommended then and won acceptance by their versatility.

With these substitute meals there is rasely a failure as can happen when preparing an expensive steak of beef or salmon. Flavoring can be varied with tiny amounts of herb seasonings or strongly flavored vegetables such as onion, celery or turnip — and by serving other colorful and flavorful vegetables with the main protein dish.

Just now before local root crops are available we can use canned whole tomatoes, canned diced beets and, for freshness, Swiss chard and cabbage sprouts from our own gardens.

If good at cost accounting, the homemaker discovers that meals with meat substitutes are produced for cents in place of dollars. There is no waste such as occurs with meat and fish bones all weighed and charged at the same price as the edible portions.

Leftovers, if any, of meatless dishes are often usable as sandwich fillings; or some can be used for cold salad with the addition of hard cooked eggs pushed through a sieve and either lettuce leaves or grated green cabbage. Certain other leftovers naturally go into a soup at the end of cooking time to avoid overcooking.

In general, avoid reheating food and especially recooking, for more nutrients are lost at each cooking temperature.

Some substitute dishes are at their best if baked in an oven, but do plan to have a sheet of cookies or scones or some other baking prepared beforehand, stored on the cookie sheet in the refrigerator ready to bake at the same time.

This is energy conserving and halves the cost of cooking the main supper dish as well as the other dish. Also, medium-sized scrubbed potatoes will bake in 45 minutes at a moderate temperature of 177° C.

First let us try a top-of-stove supper dish which has pretty well everything in it. The toasted bread or bun is used mainly for texture but would be unnecessary with baked potatoes — one small or medium for each serving.

RICE WITH SPLIT PEAS AND VEGETABLES

- 200 ml brown rice, dry
- 75 ml split green peas, dry
- 400 ml boiling salted water
- 125 ml cut up bacon pieces
- 15 ml chopped celery leaf
- 5 ml chopped chives
- 15 ml soft margarine, if needed
- 125 ml chopped swiss chard or green cabbage
- 125 ml boiling water or vegetable stock
- 250 ml frozen mixed vegetables
- 0.5 ml curry powder
- 0.25 ml chili powder
- Crisp wholewheat toast or bun

Cook brown rice and split peas in boiling salted water ahead of preparing meal if more convenient. Simmer until all liquid absorbed and grains are just tender but not mushy.

In frypan or skillet, have bacon pieces ready from a previous meal; add celery, chives and a little margarine if needed. Add Swiss chard or cabbage. Cook briefly, about 3 minutes.

Add boiling water or vegetable stock to pan; return to boiling.

Next is a savory meat substitute of wheat flakes (available in 1.36 kg plastic bags the same as oat flakes, rye flakes) which cooks in 10 to 15 minutes.

SAVORY WHEAT FLAKES WITH YEAST

- 15 ml oil for pan
- 75 ml celery stalk thin sliced
- 75 ml carrot thin sliced
- 15 ml chives chopped
- 75 ml green cabbage shredded
- few grains dried thyme and oregano
- 250 ml hot vegetable stock or water
- 2 ml salt
- 250 ml wheat flakes dry
- 15 ml brewer's yeast (torula)
- 30 ml skim milk powder

Heat oil in skillet with cover. Add celery, carrot, chives and cabbage. Cook briefly until almost tender. Add thyme, oregano. Add hot vegetable stock (use hot water if no stock). Add salt. Measure in wheat flakes; stir. Cover to simmer gently for 8 minutes. Check and stir.

Turn heat off and stir in torula yeast and milk powder without further boiling This too can be served with toasted wholewheat buns for 3 or 4 servings.

Finally a souffle to bake with oven heat using it for baking 3 or 4 medium to small potatoes.

MACARONI COTTAGE CHEESE SOUFFLE

- 2 small eggs, separated
- 25 ml soft margarine
- 250 ml cottage cheese
- 125 ml homemade lowfat yogurt
- 750 ml wheat macaroni cooked
- 50 ml wholewheat bread crumbs
- 15 ml wheat germ softened margarine
- 3 or 4 scrubbed potatoes

Grease a one-litre size casserole.

Beat egg yolks. Add soft margarine, cottage cheese and yogurt. Have macaroni left from previous cooking, add it to egg-cheese mixture.

Bake in fairly hot oven 193°C. for about 40 minutes

Don't let it scorch. Put potatoes in to bake as soon as oven is turned on. Served with diced canned beets (at this season) or a canned whole tomato for each serving. Serves 3 or 4.

These recipes will give ideas for other nourishing, satisfying and tasty meals to substitute for conventional meat and fish.

By PIERRE FRANEY

If hasty cooking is your goal, one of the most basic techniques to be learned is a method of sauteeing chicken.

If you know the few, easily learned steps involved, your range in flavors is almost limitless. You simply start with the base and add flavors according to your taste and imagination. Your inventiveness can run riot.

To illustrate what I mean, a basic saute is outlined here. It is as simple as this: Cut-up pieces of chicken are browned in butter. When cooked on both sides, the pieces are removed for a brief period. Pour off the fat (most of it from the skillet) and add chopped shallots, then wine.

The wine is reduced briefly and chicken broth is added. Swirl in a touch of butter and return the chicken pieces to the sauce. That's all there is to it.

The second recipe is a basic variation — the addition of a single herb, rosemary. It could be tarragon, or any of a dozen other herbs or spices.

For the wine, you might substitute red for white. Or use tomatoes in lieu of the chicken broth. And heavy cream could be added.

A Basic Saute of Chicken

1 chicken, 2½ pounds, cut into serving pieces
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
2 tablespoons dry white wine
½ cup chicken broth.

1. Sprinkle the chicken pieces with salt and pepper.

2. Heat two tablespoons of butter in a heavy skillet and when it is melted, add the chicken pieces, skin side down. Cook about 10 to 15 minutes or until golden brown on one side.

3. Turn the pieces and cook 10 to 15 minutes longer, or until done, turning the pieces occasionally.

4. Remove the chicken pieces and arrange neatly on a serving dish, piling them up as necessary. Keep warm.

5. Pour off the fat from the skillet and add the shallots. Cook, stirring briefly, and add the wine. Cook until reduced by half.

6. Add the chicken broth and simmer, stirring, about one minute, or until sauce is reduced to about half a cup. Add salt and pepper to taste. Swirl in remaining tablespoon of butter. Pour the sauce over the chicken and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

60-Minute Gourmet

Chicken Saute With Rosemary

1 chicken, 2½ pounds, cut into serving pieces
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh rosemary leaves
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
2 tablespoons dry white wine
½ cup chicken broth

1. Sprinkle the chicken pieces with salt and pepper.

2. Heat two tablespoons of the butter in a skillet and, when it is melted, add the chicken pieces, skin side down. Cook 10 to 15 minutes or until golden brown on one side.

3. Turn the pieces and add the chopped rosemary. Cook 10 to 15 minutes longer, or until done, turning the pieces occasionally.

4. Remove the chicken pieces and arrange neatly on a serving dish, piling them up as necessary. Keep warm.

5. Pour off the fat from the skillet — and add the shallots. Cook, stirring briefly, and add the wine. Cook until reduced by half.

6. Add the chicken broth and simmer, stirring to blend well, about one minute. Continue to cook and when the sauce is reduced to about one-half cup, swirl in the remaining tablespoon of butter. Pour the sauce over the chicken and serve immediately.

Yield: 4 servings.

Coffee Price Unchanged

CALGARY (CP) — A spokesman for General Foods says last week's announcement of a country-wide coffee-price increase in the United States will not affect Canada.

"We have no announcement of price increases," said George Beatty in a telephone interview from Toronto. "We buy and process our coffee differently than our U.S. division. The prices are based on Canada's economics."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I met this good-looking girl who waits on tables in a place near where I work. She came on like a sweet country kid who worked hard for a living and wouldn't let a guy get to first base with her, which I liked.

Well, I took her home from work a couple of times, and all she'd give me was a goodnight kiss at her door.

I asked her what she wanted for Easter and she gave me a list of clothes to buy and where to buy them. I went around and bought all the things she wanted, which set me back $400.

After I gave her these gifts, I asked her how about driving to Palm Springs for the weekend. She said nothing doing — she wasn't "that kind" of a girl.

She already wore the clothes I have her, so what do I do now? After all, 400 bucks ain't hay.

— DENNY

DEAR DENNY: If it were, you'd have enough to eat all winter. Call it a $400 lesson.

DEAR ABBY: Greg and I have been married for seven years and have two children. I noticed he was rather nervous and jumpy lately, but I thought maybe he'd been putting in too much overtime at work. He finally broke down and confessed that he had been carrying on with a friend of mine. (She's also married.) I was in shock!

He claims she threw herself at him and he was only human, so I should try to forgive and forget because it's all over now. I've honestly tried, but do you think I should be expected to socialize with this woman and her husband as though nothing had ever happened between her and my husband?

I told Greg I didn't care to socialize with this couple any more and he became angry with me. In order to avoid arguments we've been going out as a foursome, but it bothers me to even look at her.

I know that Christians should forgive, and I have prayed to the Lord for my feelings to change, but I still feel the same toward her. What should I do?

— CHRISTIAN

DEAR CHRISTIAN: Keep praying, but to thine own self be true. And unless you feel completely comfortable with this woman, tell Greg that you, too, are "only human," and you'd rather not be in her company. The Lord will understand.

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend's mother lets her kids call her "Yetta," and I think that's neat.

I tried calling my mother "Sheila" and nearly got hit in the head.

My Mom said when kids call their parents by their first names it shows lack of respect, and there would be none of that in our house.

— SONIA

DEAR SONIA: I think your mother's wishes should be respected.

Triticale: Rye with Wheat as a Mixer

Triticale (trit-i-kay-lee) is a cereal grain species that is a crossbreed between wheat (genus Triticum) and rye (genus Secale).

The triticale crop is not yet grown extensively in Canada but plant scientists are devoting a great deal of research effort to improving it.

On the North American continent the work is being carried out at the University of Manitoba and at the International Maize and Wheat Improvement Centre in Mexico. Their primary goal is to develop new breeds of triticale to provide more food for the people in underdeveloped countries who depend on cereal grains for nourishment.

Why triticale? Mainly because it can be grown almost anywhere, in many different areas under different conditions and it combines the high yields of wheat with the vigor and hardiness of rye. Also, it has a high protein content which may be as high or greater than hard red spring wheats, depending on the variety and on the climate.

But probably its most interesting quality is its flavor. It has a nutty, distinct flavor, unlike any other whole grain.

Triticale products, on a rather small scale, are already available to consumers in various countries. The dark triticale flour has found special appeal in Brazil, Norway, Hungary and India. In some areas of southern Mexico, triticale bread is seriously challenging corn tortillas and tamales.

New triticale varieties, developed in recent years as a forage crop, are now growing in South Africa, Argentina and in other countries. Of some cattlemen who have used triticale for several years, some say its high protein content helps reduce feeding costs substantially.

The commercial crop of triticale in Canada is concentrated in Saskatchewan and Manitoba. A new product is now available on the Canadian supermarket shelf in the form of triticale crackers where triticale flour is mixed with enriched wheat flour.

Although triticale is not yet a household word, after years of research it now seems certain to become the first man-made cereal grain to compete successfully with the traditional cereals.

Nuts are Hazard

Don't Let Chlorine Keep You from Pool

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I am 14. I'm trying to be a swimmer. Whenever I come home from the pool my eyes are bloodshot and tired. Is this serious? Should I give up trying to make the team? — ANDREW K.

DEAR ANDREW:

Many people who swim in chlorinated water develop the same problem as you. It is not a dangerous condition. In fact, there are some people who swim in unchlorinated water whose eyes become bloodshot and irritated, too.

There is no reason for you to give up this excellent sport because of this annoying, but not serious problem. It has been suggested that a solution of methyl-cellulose is helpful in relieving the burning sensation, and even to help the bloodshot appearance of the eyes.

My mother needs a hearing aid. She has been looking around for months. Her prime consideration is to find the smallest one on the market. Can you name any? Perhaps we can go directly to the source. — MR. N. E. N.

DEAR MR. N.:

There are a great many excellent hearing aids manufactured by reliable and scientifically oriented companies. In the last 25 years, remarkable strides have been made to make the instrument less noticeable. This has special appeal to those who consider this to be an important factor in the choice of an instrument. It may be, to them. Yet the real importance of a hearing aid is to provide serviceable hearing to those with a hearing deficit.

A small, barely visible, attractive hearing aid that does not provide the person with adequate increased hearing is almost valueless.

The single criterion for the choice of a hearing aid must be only in terms of its ability to increase the levels of hearing.

Are you sure that your mother isn't simply procrastinating in an effort to avoid facing the reality that she doesn't hear well?

I'm 72. My doctor says I need an operation on the prostate gland. I'm sure he's right, but I need to be convinced that the operation itself won't kill me. — MR. J. W.

DEAR MR. W.:

When the heart and lungs are normal, and when the blood pressure and general circulation is good, the potential risk of surgery, even at your age, is very small. The remarkable strides made in today's anesthesia makes it possible for the elderly to be operated on with almost the same degree of safety as younger people.

You can be certain that surgery would not be recommended or performed if your life would be threatened by the procedure.

New Milk Eases Digestive Problems

TORONTO (CP) — A new type of milk containing sweet acidophilus culture, which allows persons with digestive problems to drink milk, has made its debut in Ontario.

Dr. Donald Stevens, member of the pediatrics committee of the Ontario Medical Association, said the organism will be helpful to the five to 10 per cent of Canadians whose bodies don't produce lactobacillus acidophilus, a bacteria which breaks milk down into digestible forms.

He said it also should help persons on long-term antibiotic treatment, which kills the helpful bacteria, and persons suffering from diarrhea and other digestive upsets.

The organisms are helpful in controlling the growth of salmonellae and staphylococci, two bacteria that are common causes of food poisoning, Stevens said.

Charles Lawrence of Cincinnati, Ohio, a consultant hired by Becker's milk stores to market the new product, said the sweet acidophilus culture added to milk was developed by researchers at North Carolina State University.

Raj Dargay, director of franchising for Becker's, said the product, called Nutrish, tastes the same as ordinary milk and will cost 73 cents a quart.

Hotel Grows Own Herbs

NEW YORK (CP) — The Waldorf-Astoria hotel grows its own herbs in glassed-in hydroponic gardens adjacent to the kitchen. "Until we started our herb gardens," says chef Arno Schmidt, "the supply of fresh herbs, in cold winter months especially, was always limited."

The Key to a Long Life Could be Moderation

By JANE E. BRODY

"You will live long and enjoy life."

I know full well that this paper prophecy, which I found in a fortune cookie the other day, comes with no money-back guarantee for a good or long life. But while many people are content to accept whatever fate life may have in store, in the 15 years I have been a medical and science writer, I have come to believe that I can and should adopt reasonable measures to help preserve my health and prolong my life.

I know that the measures are no guarantee that I will still be spry at 90. I also know that many of the recommendations are based on a still-incomplete understanding of the major killing and crippling diseases. Some, in fact, may turn out to be wrong.

But I am convinced that my future health largely depends on how I care for myself in the present, and I try to live in accordance with what I consider the best available medical knowledge. It isn't always simple, but I have discovered that, contrary to what some people might think, it's not a life of misery and deprivation.

I am not too young to worry about my health. I'll be 38 this spring and, anyway, I think it is never too early to start taking care of oneself.

My guiding principle is moderation. Except for an absolute ban on smoking, I am not a fanatic about anything, except that I am also determined to try to realize the prophecy in my fortune cookie.

Carbohydrates account for about 60 per cent of my calories, protein for 10 to 15 per cent, and fats 25 to 30 per cent. This is considerably less fat and considerably more carbohydrates than the average North American consumes. Contrary to popular belief, starchy foods (complex carbohydrates) are not fattening; ounce for ounce, they contain less than half the calories that fat does and no more calories than pure protein. My daily cholesterol intake is about 250 to 300 milligrams (the amount in one egg yolk), less than half that of the typical adult.

About a third of my day's protein comes from vegetable sources, particularly grains. Among the animal protein foods I most frequently consume are skim milk, low-fat cottage cheese and yogurt, chicken, turkey breast, small quantities of well-trimmed beef and pork, boiled ham and fish.

My family of four regularly dines on a total of a half-pound of slivered meat or chicken, stir-fried with lots of fresh vegetables and served with hefty portions of rice, bulgur (cracked wheat) or pasta. We rarely (maybe once in three months) have a slab of meat such as a roast, steak or chops for dinner. The average portion of such cuts of meat would triple the amount of meat each person consumes.

Spaghetti with meat sauce and a big salad is another supper favorite. So is homemade soup — lots of vegetables (including potatoes), small pieces of meat and/or chicken, and/or noodles in chicken broth. The soup is a great way to use up leftovers, relieving the table-clearer of the "obligation" to eat those few hundred extra calories that often remain at the end of a meal.

Another use for leftovers is a favorite breakfast of mine — fried rice or bulgur mixed with whatever's left from last night's supper, perhaps supplemented by a scrambled egg white or slivers of boiled ham or turkey breast. The latter ingredients, incidentally, are usually consumed in sandwiches (on whole-grain or pita bread) for lunch a couple of times a week.

Following are some of my family's favorite recipes:

PANCAKES

¾ cup whole wheat flour
¼ cup white flour
¼ cup wheat germ (optional)
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 whole egg plus 1 egg white
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup buttermilk
½ cup skim milk
Fresh fruit such as bananas, strawberries or apples (see note)
Cinnamon-sugar

1. Mix dry ingredients. combine eggs, oil and milks and add to dry ingredients. Stir or beat to break up lumps. It is preferable to let batter stand for about 20 minutes before using.

2. Fry on griddle or pan lightly greased with vegetable oil or margarine. Each pancake should be about four inches in diameter.

3. Serve with sliced bananas, strawberries, or other fruit and a dash of cinnamon-sugar instead of syrup.

Makes 16 pancakes.

Note: For variety, fruit may be cooked in the pancakes: Cut two peeled apples into slivers. After pouring batter onto griddle, spread handful of apple slivers on top. Sprinkle with cinnamon before flipping. Sliced bananas can be treated similarly, but to avoid sticking, grease the pan again before flipping. These are sweet enough to serve without syrup.

COTTAGE CHEESE TOASTIES

This family breakfast favorite comes from the American Heart Association Cookbook (David McKay Company, New York, $7.95.)

4 slices white or whole wheat bread, toasted
1 cup low-fat cottage cheese
Cinnamon-sugar

Spread toast with cottage cheese. Sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar. Place under broiler for a few minutes until hot (top begins to bubble) and serve. Makes two to four servings.

Variation: Top cottage cheese with sliced banana or peaches and sprinkle with cinnamon. Omit sugar.

CRANBERRY-NUT BREAD

1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup sifted white flour
¾ cup sugar
1½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 teaspoons grated orange peel
¾ cup orange juice
1 beaten egg
1 cup fresh cranberries, cut in half or coarsely chopped, (see note)
½ cup walnuts or pecans, coarsely chopped

1. Heat oven to 350° F.

2. Sift together dry ingredients. Drizzle in oil and mix well. Combine peel, juice and egg and add to dry ingredients, mixing just to moisten.

4. Fold in cranberries and nuts.

5. Turn into greased 9-by-5-by-3-inch pan and bake for one hour. Cool, wrap and store overnight before slicing. Can be frozen.

TORONTO (CP) — Financial problems have forced the Festival Singers of Canada to temporarily suspend activities, the festival's board of directors has announced.

"Even with the generous help and guidance of the Canada Council, Ontario Arts Council, the Municipality of Metroplitan Toronto and countless individual and corporate donors . . . funds have not been sufficient to offset the unusual costs this year," the board said in a statement.

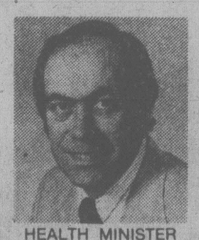
BOB McCLELLAND INVITES YOU TO EXAMINE THE FACTS ON HEALTH CARE IN B.C.



HEALTH MINISTER

"I've become deeply disturbed over the amount of misinformation and deliberate falsehoods which have been put forward in the last few weeks about our hospitals and health services, which reflect on the hospital management and hospital workers — and seem designed to create alarm in the general public.

I believe that anyone who seriously, and honestly inspects the record will have extreme difficulty in challenging my government's commitment to the highest possible standard of health care for our citizens."

■ B.C. spends 28% of its total budget on health care — more than any other province in Canada.

■ B.C.'s per capita spending on health is $480 — a record level for this province.

■ B.C.'s $1.2 billion health budget for 1979 is the largest in the province's history.

■ More than half of that spending goes to run B.C.'s hospitals — $650 million, up $300 million in just 4 years!

■ Since 1975 provincial government funding of B.C. hospitals has jumped an average of 50% (in the same period staff numbers increased 18%)

HOSPITALS	1975-1978 Increase
Campbell River	49.3%
Chilliwack	48.9%
Fort St. John	44.8%
Kamloops (Royal Inland)	46.6%
Maple Ridge	49.3%
North Vancouver	47.5%
Vancouver General	41.9%
St. Paul's Vancouver	48.5%
Victoria General	50.9%

■ Social Credit is committed to an additional $75 million to ensure B.C. hospitals meet their 1979/80 operating costs.

■ B.C. has spent $190 million on new hospital construction in the past 3 years. By comparison, the NDP government in its 3 years spent $93 million.

Social Credit has kept B.C. health care standards the highest in Canada-and they will stay that way. Don't let anyone tell you otherwise!

Troops Alert for Rain, Wind Cutting Manitoba Dikes

EMERSON, Man. (CP) — Canadian armed forces troops have settled into routine patrols of dikes and of providing support for Red River valley communities stricken by flood waters.

The troops, sent here when the river was threatening 11 days ago, are standing by in case of emergency while awaiting a transfer to military exercises in Wainright, Alta.

The flood waters at this Manitoba-North Dakota border town have been dropping since the weekend but flood-fighters are watching for strong winds that could undermine dikes.

The troops, along with the few civilians who stayed behind when other residents were evacuated, also are concerned that heavy rainfall could still raise flood waters.

The Red River at Emerson was at 790.05 feet above sea level Tuesday, down only three inches in 24 hours and still within a foot of the peak levels recorded in 1950.

The troops, members of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, patrol the dikes in shifts and pass the off-duty hours watching TV or playing cards or volleyball.

In all, 600 troops are stationed at Emerson, St. Jean Baptiste, Morris and St. Adolphe. The troops in Morris were visited Tuesday by Conservative Leader Joe Clark, who reached the water-isolated southern Manitoba community by helicopter.

Clark, who said he was not electioneering, urged voters to row or swim to the nearest polling booth to back his party. He toured the dike surrounding Morris and congratulated soldiers stationed at a local high school for their flood-fighting.

The river's peak flow has moved north through St. Adolphe and Ste. Agathe and is expected today at Winnipeg's outskirts, just below the entrance to the Red River floodway.

Winnipeg, protected by the multi-million dollar floodway built to prevent a recurrence of the major damage suffered in 1950, is due to receive peak flows Thursday.

Police are continuing to check highway traffic moving south from Winnipeg, preventing people flooded out of their Red River valley homes from returning before it is safe to do so.

Officials say people might be permitted to return to Emerson on the weekend, but it may be nearly two more weeks before residents can go back to St. Adolphe and Ste. Agathe.

The flood waters have turned much of southern Manitoba into a huge shallow lake. At St. Adolphe, flood waters have extended three kilometres to the east in the last five days.

Maj. Jerry Jensen, army commander in St. Adolphe, said people with red evacuation registration cards are being allowed into the town briefly, to check their property.

But most valley towns are still waiting to watch developments, as heavy rainfall could raise the flood waters. The forecast was sunny weather with afternoon clouds.

'Like Slavery' - Sask. Doctor

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan's Mental Health Act borders on discrimination, Dr. Colin Lipscomb, director of the Saskatoon Mental Health Centre, told the Canadian Mental Health Association's Saskatchewan regional convention.

"It is not much different than what existed during the time of slavery," said Lipscomb.

"Many local hospitals and municipalities have bylaws that prohibit people from receiving, getting treatment for any mental disorder in their own area and this must be changed."

He said the proposed Mental Health Services Act will specifically set out areas of responsibility for the doctors, the hospitals, the law enforcement agencies and the government.

Lipscomb also said ombudsmen should be provided for every hospital in the province.

Jim Harding, research director with the Alcoholism Commission of Saskatchewan, told delegates that tranquilizers were being handed out in wholesale lots in Saskatchewan to all age groups.

Sick? Better Prove It

BRANDON (CP) — Doctors in Manitoba soon may be less lenient in issuing sickness certificates to patients staying home from work.

A policy approved by the Manitoba Medical Association advises members to not provide a sickness certificate unless the patient has been ill a full five days and has been examined.

However, the policy is not expected to be put into force until it has been presented to the Manitoba Federation of Labor, Manitoba Association of School Trustees and the Manitoba Chambers of Commerce.

Moose Jaw Exit Approved

MOOSE JAW (CP) — City council Monday approved in principle construction of an exit onto Highway One from the bankrupt Golden Acres Motel on the city's eastern fringe.

Alderman Merv Nidesh's motion authorized the city to prepare plans and meet with the Haghways Minister Eiling Kramer to complete arrangements for an exit, to be financed by the motel's prospective new owner and the province.

Marshall Eliuk, of Peace River, Alta., told council that if he cannot get traffic flowing at the site, the business would go "belly up," and he was not planning to invest money in a "dead horse."

The property, which includes the motel, a trailer park and a campsite, was acquired by the Saskatchewan Economic Development Corp. (SEDCO) on a foreclosure with $509,000 owing.

Caterpillars are Coming

REGINA (CP) — A heavy infestation of tent caterpillars, which attack trees, shrubs and other plants, is expected this year, John Burton, associate deputy minister of the department of tourism and renewable resources, said.

He said a heavy outbreak is predicted for Meadow Lake, Saskatoon, Prince Albert and Hudson Bay regions.

$418,000 SPENT ON STUDIES

EDMONTON (CP) — "This is unbelievable," Ald. Ed Leger said Friday after learning more than $418,000 had been spent on city hall studies from January, 1978, to the end of March, 1979.

There were 21 administration studies costing $208,659. Among the expenses were $5,628 to study the city's photocopying requirements and $2,867 to review whether city hall should stay open Easter Monday.

Another $210,326 was spent on studies conducted through the office of Mayor Cec Purves and involved expenditures from the mayor's $100,000 annual policy research fund.

'Not for Your Average Buyer'

By PHILIP MAIL

CALGARY (CP) — The pressures of high-density housing in Winnipeg have forced the owner of a 73-year-old mansion to move the building to the placid outskirts of this city.

The Heimbecker mansion, crampled by high-rise development near its Wellington Crescent site in Winnipeg, was dismantled five years ago and now stands on a 23-acre site just west of here.

The three-storey home, with eight bedrooms, seven bathrooms, a library, a ballroom, a billiards room, a living and dining room and a top-floor suite for the servants, is on the market for $2 million.

Sherri Park, the real estate agent, says she would prefer to thrown in the furnishings as well for an extra million.

Those furnishings, some of them 300 years old, include some rare collections of porcelain and silver. Antique crystal chandeliers grace the ceilings and rich hardwoods abound. Walnut, maple mahogany and oak are used on floors, walls and trim.

"It's certainly not something for your average buyer," says Mrs. Park. "But for anyone who can afford the price, it is a beautiful and spectacular place to live."

The 10,000 square feet of floor space do not include a separate estate manager's bungalow and a seven-stall horse barn.

Two prospective buyers have expressed an interest in the house. Mrs. Park would not say how much has been offered, but she hinted there is little room for haggling on the mansion.

"It's a beautiful, absolutely perfect, work of art," she said. The owner "didn't want to see it go under the bulldozer."

The owner is 70-year-old Gladys Heimbecker, who decided before she had the building moved that its upkeep would be too much for her to handle. Mrs. Heimbecker inherited the home from her husband's parents, who made their fortune in the Parrish and Heimbecker Ltd. grain business.

The formidable taks of moving it to Calgary and reconstructing it took five years and was completed last fall, but the house was not advertised until the recent Time ad.

"We felt that te availability of a house like this should be known throughout the continent," said Mrs. Park. "I don't think there's another one like this in the country."

THE NDP DOESN'T WANT YOU TO VOTE IN THE MAY 10 ELECTION.

The reason is simple.

The NDP consistently votes as a power block, and the fewer free enterprise voters that turn out, the more divided the vote and a better chance the NDP has of gaining power.

There is a great concern by many British Columbians that voter apathy could harm the chances of your free enterprise candidate.

This general apathy apparently is not a problem with the NDP, as they have produced the most libelous, sarcastic advertising campaign in British Columbia's political history...a campaign of half-truths, mis-quotations... a campaign that has made their own party members aghast at the overtones. In fact, within their own ranks, there has been such dissension about the style of advertising, that they have pulled many of their own commercials off the air ...even the NDP now realizes it does not pay to insult the voter.

It seems that this group will stop at nothing to get elected. Remember, this is the same group that ran the province's finances into the ground in a short 3½ years.

This is the same group that arrogantly insinuated that American tourists should stay away from B.C....and drastically cut back our tourist revenue...and now it's the same group that is hoping you won't vote in the May 10 election.

Don't stand for it.

No power group can tell you how or when to vote. It's your basic individual right. It's your freedom. Show them you won't be pushed around.

VOTE MAY 10. AND BE COUNTED.

Committee to Re-elect Sensible Government.

Kept from Truth in Pen Riot: Goyer

OTTAWA (CP) — Former solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer said Tuesday he opposed out-of-court settlement of lawsuits arising from the 1971 Kingston Penitentiary riot because he wanted the truth of beatings of prisoners by guards to be made public.

However, he told a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing, his fight was for nothing. After he left the portfolio Nov. 27, 1972, he received a letter from his successor, Warren Allmand, informing him the suits had been settled out of court.

Two prisoners were beaten to death by other prisoners during the riot.

After the disturbance was brought to an end, most prisoners were transferred to Millhaven, a new maximum-security prison west of Kingston. They were beaten by a guantlet of guards as they entered Millhaven.

Goyer said the beatings were savage and some prisoners suffered fractures as a result.

The incident was recounted as Goyer was questioned by Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, the commission chairman, about whether he would have told a left-wing Montreal news agency the truth in 1972 had he known the RCMP was responsible for looting its offices in a late-night break-in with Montreal and Quebec police.

Goyer said he would have at least told the agency its allegations — that the police had broken in — were being taken seriously.

McDonald suggested that the RCMP Security Service would have pressed him not to, saying "the sky will fall on the RCMP" if the truth became known.

Goyer then noted that after resisting attempts to settle the prison lawsuits out of court, his fight went for nothing when Allmand settled out of court.

Goyer was completing 3½ days as a witness. The royal commission adjourned following his testimony and will next hold public hearings in June.

Goyer, Allmand and Sen. George McIlraith, another former solicitor-general, all have denied being informed by the RCMP that Mounties sometimes broke the law in the line of duty.

Retired RCMP commissioner W.L. Higgitt and retired director-general John Starnes of the RCMP Security Service have insisted the ministers were informed.

The stand-off may be settled next month when witnesses such as Roger Tasse, who as deputy solicitor-general sat in on meetings between the Mounties and the ministers, and Robin Bourne, director of the police and security planning and analysis group, are called.

Goyer testified the government was convinced that serious trouble was brewing in Montreal as the first anniversary of the 1970 October crisis approached.

'Malicious' CBC Show Suit Eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — Former solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer's lawyer said Tuesday that Goyer may sue the CBC as a result of a "false, malicious and perhaps even libellous" dramatization of testimony he gave a royal commission last week.

Yves Fortier, representing Goyer before a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing, said the dramatized testimony was carried on the CBC radio program Sunday Morning.

Goyer had testified in French last week and had been questioned by commission counsel Ross Goodwin in French.

The program, however, was in English. Though Goyer's French was impeccable, the English accent given him on the program was "horrible," Fortier said.

Goyer's testimony was presented in an unfavorable light, Fortier added. The translation of it was "malicious, false, and even lifeless" and it was taken out of context.

Final Chapter Bared in $1M Swindle

OTTAWA (CP) — The final chapter of an intriguing $1 million platinum swindle case, involving a sales emloyee posing as an eccentric scientist, unfolded Tuesday in the Supreme Court of Canada.

The court ruled that Engelhard Industries of Canada Ltd., who bought scraps from the fictitious scientist, should pay some damages and interest to Canadian Laboratory Supplies Ltd. (Canlab).

That decision overturned an Ontario Appeal Court ruling that dissolved Engelhard of any responsibility in the swindle perpetrated by Glenn Cook, a Canlab sales employee, from 1962 to 1969.

The two companies were operating in Toronto during the early sixties. Canlab, a hospital and laboratory supply company, was buying platinum from Engelhard, a huge U.S.-based precious metals refiner and dealer.

Cook, who hatched the plan that netted him almost $1 million, telephoned Engelhard in 1962 and told them about an eccentric scientist, James Giles, who was buying platinum from Canlab for his experiments.

Prof. Giles was looking for someone to buy platinum scraps and Engelhard obliged, paying $75 an ounce for the scrap.

This went on for seven years until the deceit was uncovered and Cook exposed.

Cook had intercepted platinum shipments bound for Canlab, cut it into scrap and returned it to Engelhard from Giles.

Cheques payable to Giles were sent to a postal box and Cook wasted no time in investing his nest-egg. Evidence at the trial indicated Cook bought into a hotel in the Barbados, built a sumptuous home on Tobago, drove a Jaguar and a Buick and wore expensive suits.

Cook served a jail sentence after the scheme was discovered. He has since been released.

Documents presented to the Supreme Court indicated that Cook got away with it for so long because he controlled all the documents involved in dealings with Engelhard.

Damages awarded Canlab cover losses which occurred from 1964 through October, 1966. Interest will be calculated from Nov. 26, 1975, the day of the original trial judgment holding Engelhard totally responsible.

The amount of damages are to be determined by the two companies. They must return to lower court if they are unable to determine a fair settlement. Canlab has been assessed all court costs.

Three Died Because Of Wearing Seatbelts

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Three persons killed April 6 in a head-on collision on a county road near here died because they were wearing seatbelts, a coroner said Tuesday.

Dr. John Blackwood, Oxford County coroner, said autopsies performed on the three shortly after the accident showed they died of massive abdominal injuries caused by the seatbelts.

In an interview with The Sentinel-Review, Blackwood said he would like to see the Ontario government sued for its 1975 law making the wearing of seatbelts mandatory.

Blackwood, a coroner for 25 years, said statistics from the province's transportation and communications ministry on lives saved by seatbelts are misleading because they are compiled by neurosurgeons who do not go to the accidents.

"In city traffic accidents seatbelts prevent injuries," Blackwood said. "On the highway in a high-speed crash they couldn't matter less."

Blackwood said people have drowned and burned to death because they could not get their seat belts undone.

Six persons, all of them in the same car and all wearing seatbelts, were killed in the April 6 collision on the country road 12 kilometres west of here during a blizzard.

Blackwood said autopsies on Mary Joyce Baigent, 47, Doris Forbes, 43, and her daughter Margaret Forbes, 20, all of nearby Ingersoll showed they died of abdominal injuries caused by the seatbelts.

Also killed were Hartwell Baigent, 48, and James Calvert Forbes, 43, who hit the windshield and William Peter Luyben, 23, of Thamesford, Ont., who hit the steering wheel. Baigent and Forbes were the husbands of two of the women killed.

Ottawa Now $11.3B in Red

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government spent $11.372 billion more than it took in last year, figures released Tuesday show.

The 1978-79 government deficit, covering the fiscal year ending March 31, was $728 million less than the $12.1 billion deficit predicted by Finance Minister Jean Chretien in his November budget.

But the deficit was 22-percent higher than the 1977-78 deficit of $9.28 billion.

Government spending for the year was $45.5 billion and total revenues were $34.4 billion.

A finance department spokesman said the year-end government deficit was considerably less than Chretien was predicting because the minister overestimated the growth of government expenditures in his budget.

The minister anticipated a 10.3-per-cent growth in government spending compared with 1977. The actual rate of increase was 9.7 per cent.

The department said the March statement should not be taken as final. The government's books for the 1978-79 fiscal year will remain open for several months to allow late payments and expenditures to be included in the final financial statement.

The year-end figures showed the government added $4.1 billion to its balances in 1978 as a result of its actions on world currency markets to support the faltering dollar.

When the dollar lost ground last year against its U.S. counterpart, traders from the Bank of Canada used U.S. dollars from the finance department's foreign currency reserves to buy unwanted Canadian dollars on international markets. These dollars were then added to the government's cash balances.

The figures also showed the government increased its funds by $9.2 billion as a result of its borrowings in Canada and from foreign sources. This figure includes sales of bonds on the currency market, sales of Canada Savings Bonds and short-term commercial paper known as treasury bills.

The net effect of all these transactions was that the government ended the year with cash balances of $6.4 billion on hand.

No single department was notably under its spending target, but several spent slightly less than Chretien had estimated, resulting n the smaller-than-expected year-end deficit.

The major sources of revenue were personal income tax payments $13.9 billion, corporation taxes $6.1 billion federal sales tax $4.6 billion, customs duties $2.7 billion and non-tax revenues (which include post office revenue and returns on government investments) $4.3 billion.

The largest single expense was interest charges on the public debt which amounted to $6.9 billion. Second was old age security benefits at $5.5 billion.

Meanwhile, the Canadian dollar fell steadily lower on foreign exchange markets Tuesday, losing another third of a cent against the U.S. currency.

The dollar opened at 86.58 U.S. cents and dropped to 86.28 at the close. The dollar had closed Monday at 86.59, down from Friday's 86.99 level when the first quarter trade figures were announced.

Economic Optimism Rising

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers will show their confidence in the economy in the months ahead by spending more of their take-home pay, says the Conference Board in Canada.

In its quarterly survey of consumers released today, the private economic research organization says: "Despite concern over rising prices, consumers expect the health of the economy to improve in the coming months and hold a more favorable view of the current employment picture than in recent months."

The board found that 27.5 per cent of those questioned expected their family's financial position to improve in the next six months, In its last survey, three months ago, the figure was 24.4 per cent and a year ago 22.9 per cent.

How Mortgage Plans Work

OTTAWA (CP) — The benefit to homeowners under schemes proposed by the Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party would depend on income levels and the size of the mortgage.

The Conservative proposals would phase in over four years deductions from taxable income of up to $5,000 for interest paid each year on a mortgage as well as a deduction of up to $1,000 for property taxes.

The NDP plan, rather than being tied to the tax system, would offer subsidies to lower interest rates on mortgages to eight per cent for families with incomes below $25,000 and to nine per cent for families with incomes from $25,000-$30,000.

There is a limit of $1,000 a year on the proposed NDP subsidy.

Listed below are examples of the benefits for homeowners in various incomes brackets with different amounts of outstanding debt on their mortgages.

The examples for the Conservative plan show tax savings when the plan is fully implemented in the fourth year. First-year savings would be one-quarter the amounts shown, half in the second year and three-quarters in the third.

The incomes listed are taxable incomes, that is, the amount after deductions on which tax is actually paid. The tax savings shown are only federal taxes. Provincial income taxes would not be reduced, the Conservatives say, unless a province choses to take part in the program.

For example, a married man with an annual income of $15,000 whose wife has no income would receive standard deductions of $5,266, reducing his taxable income to $9,734. Federal tax — excluding the provincial portion — on that income would be $1,425 at 1978 rates of taxation.

If he had a mortgage of $30,000 at 10 per cent interest, he would pay out about $3,000 for interest during the year. The Conservative plan would allow him to deduct this to reduce his taxable income further. If he paid $500 a year in property taxes, these also could be deducted, meaning a total deduction of $3,500.

This would lower his taxable income further to $6,234, on which he would pay federal tax of $718. The $3,500 deduction would therefore mean a tax saving of $707 on federal tax.

Here are some other examples showing varying levels of taxable income, property taxes (P T), mortgages (with annual interest in brackets) and the resiting federal tax saving. The examples assume mortgage interest at 10 per cent.

Taxable Income	P T	Mort (Int)	Fed Tax Saving
$15,000	$500	$30,000 ($3,000)	$832
$20,000	$600	$40,000 ($4,000)	$1,162
$25,000	$800	$45,000 ($4,500)	$1,547
$30,000	$1,000	$50,000 ($5,000)	$2,419

The NDP proposal would lower mortgage payments through a monthly subdidy. Here is how the individual in the first example above wuld fare under the NDP program with a $30,000, 10-per-cent mortgage.

Monthly Payment	Monthly Subsidy	Annual Saving
$268.35	$39.38	$473
$357.80	$52.51	$630

The second individual earning $20,000 with the $40,000 mortgage would receive this amount under the NDP plan.

Monthly Payment	Monthly Subsidy	Annual Saving
$357.80	$52.51	$630

The third individual with the $45,000 mortgage would receive a smaller subsidy because family income is in the $25,000-$30,000 range. Subsidies would reduce mortgage interest to the nine-per-cent level.

Monthly Payment	Monthly Subsidy	Annual Saving
$402.52	$29.93	$359.16

The fourth individual with the $50,000, 10-per-cent mortgage would also receive a subsidy to reduce payments to nine per cent.

Monthly Payment	Monthly Subsidy	Annual Saving

'Economic Folly'

Federal Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Alan Peterson says the Progressive Conservative proposal to buy 78 used Iranian F-14 fighter planes as part of the country's fighter replacement program is "economic folly".

"The F-14 is too expensive for Canada and purchasing 78 of the aircraft from Iran would result in a direct outflow of almost $1 billion from Canada, seriously jeopardizing our balance of payments' position," he adds.

He says the proposal ignores the need for Canadian industry and workers to be involved in building the new fighter.

"The Conservatives are at least consistent. They virtually destroyed Canadian aerospace technology by cancelling the Avro Arrow program in 1958. They appear determined to continue a policy of discouraging the development of this important Canadian industry."

Fever Pitch for NDP's Broadbent

By JOHN MARSHALL
FP News Service

WINDSOR — If ever there was a branch plant city in this land of branch plant industry (read United States control) it's Windsor.

Like Oshawa, home town of visiting Ed Broadbent, it's a community largely based on car wheels, made-in-Canada for U.S. corporations.

But in this city of about 200,000, it's not only the fact that you are in some way, working for the Yankee dollar that makes Pierre Trudeau's elephant-and-mouse analogy an uncomfortable factor of daily life.

There's also the humbling omniprescence of the multi-powered skyline of Detroit, with its more than one-and-a-half million people.

Maybe that's why a standard Broadbent campaign pitch caught fire, why about 1,000 senior high school students broke into such prolonged applause, he finally had to interrupt it to continue. Only to start it all over again.

It had been a normal set-piece reaction to a set-piece presentation, except for some enthusiastic clapping on the sexual equality issue.

Then Broadbent moved into what he considers the over-riding campaign issue, unemployment and inflation, two sides of the same devalued coin that if solved, could also solve national unity. And the key to that, he says, is long-term industrial strategy.

And for that — "there's a fundamental decision to be made. It's time we dealt with the issue of foreign ownership, not because we're anti-American, that's silly, we invited foreign investment.

"It's time for us to grow up. My generation and, I suspect, your generation, says it's time we can do it here (his voice is rising) ... we don't need to export our resources abroad and buy back the finished product."

He has said it often before. And from his audiences, normally partisan, it gets the expected good reaction. The touring press corps ignores it. Here at Riverside Secondary School, he continues, his voice pitched higher still, louder — his hands punching out, not like Joe Clark's on every syllable, but to underline the stress points: "It's time to bring Canada home to Canadians." The audience is moving, a voice cries excitedly, "You're right," and, nearly lost in the burst of applause, he finishes — "that's what it's all about." And they ignore him as he tries to go on, drown him out in clapping, shouts, whistles for half a minute.

As the applause tapers off, he's shouting " ... in this context it's time Canadian resources were owned by Canadians, controlled by Canadians and turned into manufactured goods here by Canadians (the applause is starting again) for export all over the world," and the sound burst out, and the kids are looking at each other, talking animatedly.

There are questions from the audience and answers. The autopact: the NDP would insist on regular statements of intent every three years from the auto big three to achieve 15,000 to 25,000 more jobs in Canada.

ELECTION 79

Medicare: they'd go back to the original system dropped by the Liberals with Conservatives endorsation two years ago. This would mean the tight federal auditing of funds to the provinces.

Defence: the NDP would get out of NORAD and NATO, specialize in defending the 200-mile limit and international peacekeeping.

To these and other points there's the normal polite applause.

And then thre's the last question. A young woman asks if the NDP would "try to get back the BNA Act."

It's old hat. The press are putting away their pads, preparing to disconnect recorders, turn off lights. And standing there in his shirt sleeves on the floor of the gymnasium, a podium discarded earlier, Broadbent is giving an old answer.

"It's long overdue. It's time we had our own constitution. It has to be done. Of course it's tough, I don't underestimate the problems — but (and the voice goes up again in register and volume) but, by God as a Canadian, I feel it's about time we had our own constitution here in Canada ..."

And the applause, the shouts and whistling, again goes on for nearly half a minute.

Horns of TV Dilemma For Rhinoceros Team

OTTAWA (CP) — The Rhinoceros Party, campaigning to spoof serious electioneering, has been authorized to bump some Liberal and Progressive Conservative radio and television election ads.

The Canadian Radio-Television Telecommunications said Tuesday the Rhinos have been allotted four minutes out of the 6.5 hours of advertising time broadcasters must make available to officially registered parties.

To give them four minutes, the CRTC lopped two minutes off the 155 Liberal minutes and two minutes from the 134 the Conservatives had.

The decision sent Liberal and Conservative organizers scrambling where they could cut ads from time already allocated.

Whether the Rhinos can or will use the allocated time is another question. Rhino campaign agent Robert Millett of Montreal said: "We have some money but we don't have millions."

Liberal and Conservative organizers opposed the Rhino application for ad time, saying the time was already divided and the were no Rhino MPs, the party had no popular vote in the last election or any other historical claim.

But the Elections Act says ad time must go to officially registered parties with a minimum 50 candidates.

When the other parties couldn't agree on the Rhinoceros time at a meeting last week, the CRTC decided to impose the four-minute ruling.

Untouched by the decision is the New Democratic Party with 63 minutes, the Social Credit party with 22 minutes and the Marxist-Leninist Party of Canada and the Communist Party of Canada, each with eight minutes.

If the Rhinos do manage to scrounge up enough dollars to go on television, viewers may be in for an entertaining four minutes.

Rhino public meetings typically feature clowns, acrobats and an off-key brass band. There always seems to be someone wheeling around on a unicycle. And who knows, their TV ads could be the same.

To help solve the country's transport problems, for instance, the Rhinos propose that Canadians drive on the left-hand side of the road. To avoid confusion, the switch would be gradual: In the first year, only trucks and buses would drive on the left.

Party organizers are vague when asked what seats they expect to win, but one thing is definite — any Rhino candidate elected to Parliament will sell his seat for cash to the highest bidder.

The party has 63 candidates, most of them in Quebec. In one riding, they have two candidates, but there's nothing wrong with that, they say: An MP's salary can easily support two people.

Roy Rejects TV Offer

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Social Credit leader Fabien Roy has rejected a CBC offer of a half-hour reply, with translation, to the May 13 television debate in English among the three other party leaders.

In a telegram to the CBC Tuesday, Roy said he felt forced to decline the CBC offer because Prime Minister Trudeau refused to participate in a French-language debate. Roy speaks no English.

"The attitude of the Liberal party constitutes in our opinion an insult towards the francophones of the whole country," Roy said in the telegram to CBC official Donald Ferguson.

"In acting this way the prime minister of Canada deprives an important part of the Canadian population of enjoying an equal right to information as a result of his policy of arrogance towards francophones."

Roy told reporters at a news conference the refusal of the Liberal party to take part in the French-language debate was proof that Trudeau was afraid to face him.

Energy Issues Hinge on the NEB

OTTAWA (CP) — Voters have been presented with different interpretations of Canada's energy problems by federal party leaders campaigning for the May 22 election while daily reports outline growing gasoline shortages in the U.S.

The Liberals talk of standing up to multinational oil companies, the Conservatives of speeding up domestic production and the New Democrats say they are firmly opposed to any petroleum exports.

But the campaign promises will move into the background until a major round of public hearings, likely to begin in early July, determines whether any surplus of natural gas should be exported to the U.S. and if so, at what price.

The National Energy Board (NEB), the federal regulatory agency, will conduct omnibus hearings on Canadian gas supplies, look at a number of industry applications for increased exports and deal with two competing proposals to extend a gas pipeline from Montreal into the Maritime provinces.

The price, a source of conflict between Ottawa and the primary producing province of Alberta for several years, is set by the cabinet on recommendations from the NEB.

The Liberal government is giving serious consideration to another increase in the export price of natural gas of 14 or 15 cents a thousand cubic feet, perhaps as early as Aug. 1.

The export price was increased to $2.30 (U.S.) a thousand cubic feet May 1 from $2.16, bringing the total annual value of exports to about $2.3 billion.

Gillespie said this week he would sit down and discuss a further increase with Alberta before making a decision. But no action will be taken until after the election.

Neither the Liberals nor the Conservatives have made unqualified statements calling for increased gas exports.

(b) The protection of the environment, and
(c) The protection of the Public.

On completion of the Inquiry, the Commissioners will make recommendations to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council for setting and maintaining standards for workers and public safety, and for protection of the environment in respect to exploration, mining and milling of uranium ores.

A preliminary schedule of Community Meetings in June and July 1979 has been arranged as follows:

KELOWNA — Tuesday, June 5; Wednesday, June 6
CLEARWATER — Friday, June 8
KAMLOOPS — Monday, June 11

CASTLEGAR — Thursday, June 21
WILLIAMS LAKE — Tuesday, June 26
VANDERHOOF — Wednesday, June 27
FORT NELSON — Tuesday, July 3
ATLIN — Wednesday, July 4

The purpose of the Community Meetings is to give the Commissioners the opportunity of understanding the local issues facing these communities that could be affected by uranium mining in British Columbia. It will also permit local organizations or members of the public an early opportunity to express their views regarding the issues that are to be considered by the Commission. The Commission plans on returning to these and other communities where required, at a later date after more technical information is available.

Public interest groups who are applying for "Participant Funding" may, if they wish, make an opening statement at these Meetings, but they will not be expected to present their main submissions until the Fall Hearings. However, anyone who particularly wishes to speak at the above Public Meetings in June or July, and who have not already done so, are requested to advise the Secretary in advance.

During the course of the Hearings, the Commissioners will make on-site inspections of uranium deposits and local environmental settings.

Snap, Crackle and Pop from Trudeau

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

HALIFAX — Combative as ever Prime Minister Trudeau showed Tuesday he is ready to rub the postal workers' nose in it.

Members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers were among the estimated 200 hecklers who waved a sea of placards at Trudeau when he arrived here by boat from Dartmouth, just across the harbor, for a mid-day rally.

The postal workers are angered by the three-month jail term to their president Jean-Claude Parrot Monday, for defying Parliament's back-to-work order.

The prime minister snapped, crackled and popped as he taunted the hecklers, attacked Conservative leader Joe Clark and laid on the line once again the need for a strong national government — his government — to be elected May 22.

"I want to thank CUPW, the Canadian Union of Postal Workers," Trudeau shouted at one point.

"When they come to my meetings to heckle, people know I can't be all that bad," he jeered to loud applause from the crowd estimated at 1,500, jammed into the restored 18th century waterfront square.

"They want one justice for union bosses and another for the rest of us," he said to more cheers from the crowd.

"We need members of Parliament who will stand up to CUPW," the prime minister declared. "We need in Parliament, men and women who are prepared to do unpopular things."

He then accused Clark of being ready to "agree with anyone, anywhere, anytime," attacking the Conservative leader's willingness to recognize provincial jurisdiction over the fisheries and natural resources.

The prime minister said he didn't blame Nova Scotia Premier John Buchanan for fighting to have fisheries under provincial jurisdiction.

"But I object when Mr. Clark meets him and says 'You can have it'," Trudeau said.

The prime minister claimed the income of fishermen has doubled in the past four years because a strong federal government was able to impose and enforce the 200-mile economic zone and negotiate the phasing out of other nations' historic claims to fish in Canadian waters.

Trudeau was in Charlottetown Tuesday night holding a rally for all four Prince Edward Island ridings as the last search and rescue operation of the campaign. That is a search for scarce votes and a rescue operation for areas of ridings that may be in trouble.

Trudeau told a crowd of 800 supporters in Holland College Royalty Centre, that 15 Conservative candidates in Quebec have disassociated themselves from Clark's adamant stand on Quebec separation.

The Conservative leader has declared that there is no provision for a province to leave Canada even if it voted to do so and he would not discuss the issue.

Clark tours flooded areas of Manitoba

Direction Change Urged by Clark

By PETER HADEKEL
FP News Service

ELECTION 79

WINNIPEG — Joe Clark drew an enthusiastic rowd of close to 1,000 people here Tuesday for an attack on the Trudeau government's economic record.

Sticking closely to his standard campaign speech, Clark said Canadians want a change in direction in the country and "they won't get it from Pierre Trudeau."

Clark said the Trudeau government's policies have moved the country toward greater central control of the provinces, the economy and the private lives of Canadians.

Clark warned his audience that a vote for the NDP in the federal election would be wasted. "The NDP has become just a farm team for the Trudeau Liberals."

Clark also told Manitobans that they should not be fooled by the presence of a separatist government in Quebec.

"Don't let the separatists pretend they are the only Quebecers, thre is a federalist majority in that province."

Clark said that in Quebec "there is a sense of self-confidence, and a determination to go out and build."

The Tory leader described Prime Minister Trudeau as "a man alone, a man unable to attract, or unwilling to attract, the talents of people," to work on building Canada.

He said that Trudeau has lost the best ministers in his cabinet over the last 11 years and said if ministers like John Turner were unable to succeed in the Trudeau government, it is unlikely that the current Liberal recruits would do any better.

Earlier, Clark toured the flood-ravaged Red River Valley area by helicopter and met with residents in the flooded town of Morris.

He promised a Conservative government would provide financial assistance to prevent future flood damage by moving farm houses to safer ground.

"Occasionally we need emergencies to prove just how well communities can work when they have to," Clark told the residents, adding that he was proud of their efforts.

Clad in a yellow rain jacket and yellow boots, Clark was well received on his tour of the flooded area, from which 80 per cent of local residents have been evacuated.

West Role For Senate

ELECTION 79

EDMONTON (CP) — Senator Ray Perrault said Tuesday a restructured Senate with provincially-appointed members and greater Western representation would help cement national unity.

Regions need to articulate their needs, the government leader in the Senate said, but for Canada to remain united regions must understand the needs of each other.

A former Liberal leader in British Columbia, Perrault is touring the Western provinces to campaign for various Liberal candidates in the May 22 election.

In an interview before accompanying Edmonton West Liberal candidate Mike MacDonald in door-to-door visits, Perrault said while the Senate needs to be reformed, he was "tired of hearing that senators are old men in wheelchairs, clipping interest coupons from dividend cheques."

Perrault said Alberta and British Columbia are the two fastest-growing provinces and "we need to have our views represented to the government through the House of Commons and the Senate."

"I'm not saying the only way you can get representation is by electing government members. But when you have all the elected people in the opposition or all in the government, you don't get the best possible representation for the provinces."

Senior Engineer Hired

Despite a recent freeze on hirings Saanich council has authorized the creation of a new senior position in the engineering department.

The job is called land development engineer. The person appointed will be required to supervise the provision of sewage, water and other services to new development and ensure taxpayers don't have to foot the bill.

Municipal engineer Clifford Warren said Tuesday the official will have specific responsibility for the preparation of development cost charge bylaws, a fairly new legislative tool which allows municipalities to bill developers in advance for the cost of off-site services required.

Included in the calculation of such a charge are the costs incurred in providing sewage, water, drainage, roads and public open space.

The land development engineer will assess in advance what services are required and draw up a bylaw fixing an appropriate charge under each service heading — so much per lot created and dwelling unit built.

The fee is payable before the applicant receives subdivision approval or a building permit.

In the case of the recently-approved North Quadra residential subdivision, the development cost charge levied against the developer amounts to nearly $1,800 per single-family lot.

Warren said he wants to advertise the job immediately and fill it within two months.

"There is some urgency because the position should be of financial benefit to the municipality," he added.

★ CREMATORIUM OBJECTION

Saanich municipality will file an official objection with the consumer affairs ministry against an application for a proposed crematorium at Hatley Memorial Gardens in Colwood.

Saanich owns jointly with Victoria the 41-year-old crematorium at the Royal Oak burial park, and believes there is no need for another in Greater Victoria.

A letter to council from Percy Frampton, vice-chairman of the board of cemetery trustees, warns that "to split the volume of cremations between two crematoriums would undoubtedly require an increase in the current fee at Royal Oak."

He explains that in such circumstances building repairs, maintenance and other costs would not be reduced in proportion to the reduced revenues "and therefore the loss of income could only be offset by an increase in fees."

Valleyview Memorial Gardens, which owns the Colwood burial park, has applied to the consumer affairs ministry for a "certificate of public interest" to establish a crematorium there.

Objections or other submissions have to be filed with the ministry by June 17.

Beating Murder Charged

A 35-year-old Courtenay man has been charged with second-degree murder after a Ladysmith hotelman died after a fight outside a Duncan beer parlor Monday night.

RCMP said Walter Burnside, 45, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria from injuries received in a fight with another man in the parking lot of the Village Green Inn.

No details of the incident have been released.

His First Million $$: . . . Then off to Reno

Qualicum Beach logger Chuck Skittles for years had dreamed of winning a million dollars but when it happened this week he took the news calmly — at first.

"Well, that's my first million," he said when his numbers came up in the Loto Canada draw.

But the next day he was too excited to even stop to eat as the significance of the win came home.

"I have retired," he announced.

Skittles and his wife, Ruby, both in their early 60s, began making plans for the future, including travel and taking it easy.

First up was a long-planned trip to Reno and that's where they are now.

But Qualicum Beach will continue to be home base.

Skittles has worked as a logger for 40 years for MacMillan Bloedel at Northwest Bay. He had asked the company if he had enough pension credits to retire soon and M-B confirmed that he had and he could set his retirement date whenever he chose.

The decision was easy when he won the million. His wife has been working in an insurance office to help with family finances and was hoping to be able to retire soon as well.

She also has retired, neighbors said.

Skittles, who was born on the 13th of the month, has bought many lottery tickets over the years and always looks for the number 13. He likes to have it in the middle of the number.

It was a ticket with number 13 in the middle that brought him the million dollars.

Earlier he had won a total of $1,000 on the Western Express lottery plus $250 on the Provincial.

Saanich Studies Recycling Plans

A Saanich citizens' task force on recycling will try to persuade the municipality and its residents to change their wasteful ways.

The group, under the chairmanship of Ald. Howard Sturrock, has been given broad terms of reference and four months in which to prepare a comprehensive program for council's public works committee on recycling in the community.

Appointed to the task force are eight residents with experience in garbage recycling and conservation: Nina Corley-Smith, Barbara Corry, Hal Knight, Audrey J. Johnson, Michael Manning, John Mayba, Elly Roelofsen and Wendy Worthington.

The Saanich staff representative on the committee is refuse superintendent Syd Byrne, and Local 374 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees will also be asked to nominate a delegate from the garbage pick-up crew.

Anniversary Stamp Not Dad, Claims Prairie Author's Son

WINNIPEG (CP) — The son of Frederick Philip Grove says the post office used a picture of the wrong man on first-day covers commemorating the 100th anniversary of the birth of the Prairie novelist.

In a telephone interview from Toronto, A. Leonard Grove said he was "absolutely thunderstruck" when he saw the picture on the cover at the unveiling ceremony in Winnipeg last week.

"I couldn't believe what I saw," he said. "It was an incredible disappointment."

Grove taught in rural Manitoba early in the century and later moved to Ontario to work as an editor. He wrote a number of novels about life on the Prairies and died in 1948.

His son said the post office should withdraw the first-day covers and recall those already issued. He said he plans to pursue the matter further with postal officials in Ottawa this week.

Miss Brodie Still In Her Prime, on TV

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer

NEW YORK — Muriel Spark thinks everyone has been taught by a Miss Jean Brodie — even men.

The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie probably is the best known of Miss Sparks' work, since it not only was critically well-received as a novel in 1961-62, but also was brought to the London stage with Vanessa Redgrave in the title role in 1966, to Broadway with Zoe Caldwell in 1968, and won an Oscar for Maggie Smith for her portrayal of the spirited schoolteacher in the 1969 film.

Now a Scottish production of The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie is being broadcast on PBS in six one-hour weekly episodes beginning last Monday, with British actress Geraldine McEwan as the exuberant Scottish schoolmistress of the 1930s who surrounds herself with a set of elite girls she picks for her coterie and calls the "creme de la creme."

"People from many other countries — even from the Far East — write to me to say, 'We had a Miss Brodie,'" Miss Spark said in an interview.

"Even men write about a special man teacher they had, usually someone who was against the policy of the school and developed a special set and a feeling of conspiracy.

"Like Miss Brodie, I think that all teachers have preferences and they used to show it — they prefered bright children and children with character. And particularly in Scotland, the accent was on brains."

Miss Spark, as Scottish as the ginger cast to her hair, now lives in Italy, but she said of her own school days, "I had a teacher who was sort of like Miss Brodie, although not entirely like. They were different times — Miss Brodie came later in the 1930s, and was much more liberal sexually. My teacher was against all of what she called 'impurity.'"

In the matter of women's liberation, the author mentioned that her grandmother marched for women's suffrage with England's Mrs. Pankhurst, and she backs efforts for equal opportunity and pay, but is put off by some aspects.

"I was brought up as an independent woman," she said. "I really think the role of women has been a pretty good influence in the Judeo-Christian society. Women always led by influence. I'm in favor of women's liberation from the economic viewpoint, but I wouldn't want men's and women's roles reversed. I don't want to get up and open doors for men and have to kiss their hands."

She admitted she was adversely influenced by the Italian women's movement in which — as often happens — "no one works hard at it except the Communists and they're so man-hating and fierce, they kick policemen and write ghastly obscenities on the walls.

"I think the war is pretty much won in most places — except in England where the women are a little masochistic and really ought to wake up."

Apple Worth $30,000

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A jury awarded $30,000 in damages Tuesday to a woman who claimed she was improperly arrested for eating an apple on the subway. Victoria Churchville, a 28-year-old Washington journalist, testified that she took two bites of her apple on the train and was warned by a policeman that eating on the train was illegal. But she was not arrested until after she had left the train and her lawyer argued there was no law against eating on the platform.

Primates Older Than Believed?

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Bone fragments found in Burma indicate that high primates, the ancestors of man and apes, may have developed 10 million years sooner and thousands of miles further east than initially believed, according to Dr. Russell L. Ciochon.

Ciochon, in his first year on the anthropology staff at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, participated in expeditions in Burma that resulted in the discovery of four bone fragments possibly 40 million years old.

Prior to the discoveries in 1978 and early this year, the oldest evidence of primates was found in the Fayum region of Egypt and was believed to be about 30 million years old.

Ciochon said the discovery of the four lower jaw fragments of higher primates in Burma represents "important new additions to our primate understanding." He said the fossils come from a period "at or near the ancestry of all higher primates."

"In a sense, we have traced the line of humans, apes and monkeys as far back as we can go," he said.

But he cautioned against saying that the new discoveries provide a direct link to the origin of man.

"I am not indicating they are ancestral to homo sapiens," Ciochon said. "I'm not going to say, based on what we've found, that the ancestors of man can be traced to Burma."

The first of the Burmese fossils was discovered in 1978 by two Burmese scientists from the Mandalay Arts and Sciences University. That discovery resulted from a project developed by Ciochon and Dr. Donald E. Savage of the University of California at Berkeley. Ciochon was a graduate student under Savage.

Ciochon said the jaw fragments, about the size of a 50-cent piece, would be from an animal the size of a small ape, standing about three feet tall and weighing 25 to 30 pounds.

Dr. Elwyn L. Simons, director of the Duke University Primate Centre in Durham, said the fossils recovered by Ciochon and Savage might be 40 million years old but said there must be further evidence to substantiate those claims.

"I think it's work that should be continued," Simons said. "He (Ciochon) and his co-workers have found only lower jaw parts so far."

30,759 Cars Recalled

DETROIT (AP) — Jaguar Rover Triumph Inc. says it is recalling 30,759 cars in the U.S. to repair various fuel system problems that could cause loss of throttle or collapse of the fuel tank. Brakes also are to be repaired on some models.

In an announcement from Leonia, N.J., the importer said it wants to install heated throttle bodies on 4,395 Jaguar XJ6 sedans of the 1978 and early 1979 model years. In extremely cold weather, icing could disable the action of the throttle, the company said.

For 19,023 cars of the 1976-78 model years, a hose must be replaced between the fuel tank and the fuel tank separator cannister. The existing hose could become kinked, leading to collapse of the fuel tank through lack of venting.

The importer said 7,341 cars of the 1979 model year were recalled for two reasons:

First, a potential casting defect on an estimated one-third of the cars could result in the cracking of a caliper retaining lug, causing loss of braking efficiency.

Second, another hose or bracket in the fuel system will be replaced. That hose could get caught in the hood.

Worker Stashes $25M Payments

BALTIMORE (AP) — The bank thought it was having problems with the mail — until a former mailroom employee admitted he had stashed 25,000 Master Charge credit card payments because he couldn't keep up with his work. The payments totalled about $2.5 million.

The employee, Ronald Evans, 26, of Baltimore, has been charged with cashing three stolen money orders worth $253.

Evans, who had been an employee of Maryland National Bank about six months before he was fired last month, is free under a $2,500 bond pending a court appearance on the stolen money order charges.

Baltimore County Detective Philip Wood said the money orders, all Master Charge payments, were cashed between Feb. 25 and March 25.

During the weekend, bank officials found about 25,000 payments for Master Charge accounts stashed in sacks and hidden under boxes in the bank's mailroom.

The discovery came after the bank, which serves about 300,000 Master Charge accounts, was deluged with calls from hundreds of customers complaining they were not given credit for their payments.

"At first we thought it was a problem with the postal service," bank spokesman Daniel Finney said.

But Finney said the mystery was solved when Evans called a mailroom supervisor and told him he had hidden the bill payments.

Evans told the supervisor he did it because he could not keep up with the workload, Finney said.

Canada Taking 900 Refugees

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuter) — More than 900 Vietnamese refugees will be flown out of Malaysia for resettlement in Canada in the next 10 days, the Canadian High Commission said today.

This will bring to 2,280 the number of Vietnamese "boat people" to be taken by Canada in the first five months of this year, it said.

Canada will resettle 2,720 Vietnamese refugees now in Malaysia in the remaining seven months of this year, it said.

Moscow's Busy Moving Buildings

Using a 15th-century Italian method, the Russians are reorganizing the city centre by rolling their historic buildings to and fro.

A new city department, formed to handle the moves, has just completed its first project, the 34-metre move of the Trud newspaper building along the city's main avenue, Gorky Street, in sight of the Kremlin.

Travelling a few metres at a time, at a speed of about one metre an hour, the 10,000-ton building drew large crowds as it shifted almost imperceptibly down the street.

The movement, along eight pairs of specially laid iron rails, was so hard to notice that construction men demonstrated it to reporters by placing a matchbox on a rail to see it slowly crushed by one of the scores of iron rollers.

The Trud building, built at the turn of the century with scroll-like cornices at its corners, was reinforced with steel bars for the move, and it appears to have arrived at its destination intact but for some broken glass.

The basement was left behind.

In an interview, one of Moscow's leading architects, Nikolai Sobolev, said the moving technique was developed 500 years ago by Italian architect Aristotele Fioravante, who used wooden rails to move a building 20 metres along a downtown street.

The new department, known in a typical Soviet acronym as Mosfundamentspetsstroi, for Moscow Foundation Special Construction, has another 40 major moves on its schedule, said the government newspaper Izvestia.

The huge Prague restaurant and the Shusev architectural museum, both on the ever-widening Kalinin Street, are to be moved backwards, though observers are puzzled as to where the Prague, on a small block of its own, can move to.

One of Moscow's first fire towers, a quaint little turret near Izmailova Park, is also to be moved.

All this moving about of buildings is caused by Moscow's unusual master plan of reconstruction that controls all building of streets and structures and designates "cultural reserves" around parks, streets and buildings in the city centre that cannot be modified.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Black 'Cloud of Death' Kills Six

DAYTONA BEACH (AP) — A swirling black tornado killed an elderly woman, and at least five other persons have died in wind storms which cut a trail of wreckage across central Florida.

Damage from Tuesday's tornadoes and heavy rains was estimated in the millions of dollars, state officials said. Scores were injured.

In St. Petersburg, 95 kilometres west of Auburndale, flood waters claimed several lives and police continued to search early today for two bodies.

The water swept a woman and her 12-year-old daughter from a busy street near a shopping centre. The woman's body was found about 12 blocks away, but the girl was still missing.

Also missing in St. Petersburg was a 53-year-old Dade City nurse whose truck floated off a road into a creek. Witnesses pulled her 15-year-old passenger out of the water, but the current carried Norah Smith beyond their reach.

Three other persons died at Brooksville, 80 kilometres north of St. Petersburg, when two cars collided on a rain-slicked highway, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

Thirteen Auburndale high school students were cut and bruised when the tornado tore the roofs from school buildings.

"We were lucky," John Stewart, the principal, said. "We got advance warning of tornadoes in the area and we came out all right."

He said the toll could have been worse if not for drills begun after a tornado hit a Largo elementary school last spring, killing two children.

The Adams Packing Association citrus plant west of Auburndale looked "as if a giant fist had slammed down in the middle," one witness said. A warehouse was destroyed and a main refrigeration line ruptured, spewing ammonia into the air, police said. No casualties were reported.

"Everything was just wiped off the tables and flung out of the kitchen, except my 10-gallon aquarium," Ms. Evans said. "My five goldfish are still swimming away."

Locusts Curbed

ROME (AP) — Plagues of locusts that threatened large crop losses in northeast Africa, Arabia and southern Asia have been brought under control, but the threat is not over, Assistant Director-General D. F. Bommer of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization said Tuesday. He called for continued vigilance to prevent a renewed outbreak.

GARDENING

Those Thinnings a Bonus From the Vegetable Patch

As vegetable seeds emerge through their soil covering in the open garden, you may notice a crust of soil has formed along the row. This happens when rows have needed daily gentle watering to maintain moisture around the seeds; this has compacted the soil.

The condition occurs in a clay soil even when well prepared but it can be reduced by spreading in the row before seeding, a half-inch or so of soil from the bottom of the compost heap. Then over the seeds scatter another layer, judging depth by size of seeds — more for peas and beans, less for carrots, lettuce and similar-size seeds.

After a few years of regular additions of humus (of all kinds) clay soil becomes a clay loam. Seedlings will still grow more strongly if compost is spread along each row at seeding time.

The most useful (or profitable if you like) returns from a vegetable plot whether at home or at an allotment site can only be obtained by thinning the small, seeded plants. Few of us can sow the seeds thinly enough. Even though we may consciously do our best, little clusters of seedlings appear.

Begin by thinning clusters of seedlings to the one strongest when their first true leaves have expanded. This gives a chance to see what you have likely to grow on.

Leaves of beets and turnips are well known as useful and delicately flavored cooked greens, so there need be no waste when thinning. Just nip off the hairy little root pieces and throw into the compost pail, using the washed leaves and stems either chopped into a salad or lightly cooked with other vegetables. Onion thinnings are used in the same way.

Spacing between the root vegetables varies according to size of mature roots. If onions are to be left for ripening in the dry soil of late summer you need to leave five to six-inch spacing between seedlings. But as thinning progresses gradually you get the benefit of fresh little onions each time of going over the row until the final spacing is reached.

The same method is used with thinning beets. Do the work gradually, taking the smallest plants where they are crowded. Leave an inch between, then pull out alternate plants leaving two-inch spacing.

Carrots are the ones we always sow too thickly, so thinning must begin early to get value from the remainder. Spacing to one inch will give nice sweet roots for eating raw. Then taking alternates will leave a few to grow larger.

Lettuce sown at about two dozen seeds every two weeks can be transplanted into the remainder of the prepared row at the rate of one dozen a week. Then sow more seeds, perhaps of a different kind. Leaf lettuce half grown take five or six inches of space; full grown most kinds need nine inches.

All sizes of lettuce can be used in sandwiches and salads, so there is no need to wait for full-grown specimens. This is why frequent, small sowings of this vegetable is recommended. The thinnings are used constantly and are of course at their best when fresh; so eat them often in small quantities.

These early sowings soon bring usable returns if you decide not to waste anything that can be considered as part of a meal.

Beating Charged

To The Residents of Saanich & The Islands

Tomorrow you will make an important decision. With your ballot you will elect an MLA for Saanich and the Islands. Many things will determine your choice at the polling booth; the candidate's past achievements, the policies the candidate will work for in the future and the performance of the candidate himself.

It is not my intention here to restate the many community projects with which I have been associated. The record, I believe, speaks for itself. However, I will say that throughout a number of years in public office, in local, and provincial governments, it has been a privilege — and a pleasure — to work for the people of Saanich and the Islands.

By nature and in all tasks which I have undertaken, my attitude has been positive — rather than negative. It's easy to be "against" some project or question which concerns the electorate. It is more difficult, but infinitely more important to be "positive" — to work with individuals and groups in achieving the goal which is considered desirable. Headlines and short statements to radio and television attract attention for the moment; but it is the steady, persistent, day-to-day work and attention to detail which succeed in the final result.

In reviewing the promises I made during the 1975 election campaign it's encouraging to note that many problems of that time have been resolved.

I believe most voters judge the candidate on past performance and, in almost every respect, I have attempted to serve the entire constituency and each individual in it through hard work and persistence.

Provincially, there are two promises which I specifically mentioned in 1975. These were the appointment of an independent Auditor-General's Office to identify areas of government waste or inefficiency. That position is now firmly in place, to increase accountability to you and all taxpayers. Secondly, we proposed an Ombudsman, to make the government more accessible and to aid individuals in their dealings with all departments and agencies. That has also been achieved.

I believe in public service through elected office. It carries a great responsibility and requires the total energy of the individual who is elected. With your approval and support it is my pledge to continue to work on behalf of all constituents regardless of their political affiliation.

I shall be happy to be of service to you again, as your M.L.A.

Sincerely,

Hugh Curtis

P.S. For transportation to your polls please phone 479-9334 in Saanich, 656-6232 in Sidney, and 537-9331 on Salt Spring Island.

Inserted by the Committee to Re-Elect Hugh Curtis, MLA for Saanich and the Islands.

Saudis Stay On Alert

By DON OBERDORFER

RIYADH (WP) — Shortly after the fall of the Iranian monarchy earlier this year, officials at a Saudi port discovered in the arriving cargo a cache of Soviet submachine guns and Bulgarian pistols.

The discovery, which was not publicly announced, touched off a wave of concern and a customs crackdown that still continues.

Containerized cargoes at Saudi ports have been opened and searched. Building supplies, automobiles and even foodstuffs have been subject to unsually rigorous inspection.

A few days ago even crates of oranges were unpacked, orange by orange, in the search for weapons, according to a foreign businessman.

The Saudis profess not to be worried about a possible spread of Islamic radicalism from Iran, which is just across the Persian Gulf, and they say with justification that internal conditions in the desert kingdom are far more stable than in Iran.

One said: "If you buy a car in Iran, they put an import tax on it to make it more expensive. Here the government provide a subsidy to make it affordable," he said.

Access of Saudi citizens to King Khalid, Crown Prince Fahd and other members of the royalty in high posts is a safety valve against popular discontent.

Saudi Arabia is an absolute monarchy with no written constitution or elected representatives. The institution of the majlis, the informal meeting at which petitions and appeals for favors can be made to high officials, is its major gesture to democracy. The king, crown price and other Saudi leaders see citizens at majlis sessions several days a week.

Petitions or complaints that are addressed to the king cannot be intercepted by royal court officials, Saudis say.

Recently a Saudi driver who had lost his job at the kingdom's air base at Dhahran complained to the king, touching off investigations by two inspection teams from Riyadh. The teams repored that the man was properly fired because of a lack of work for him to do, but the king ordered that he be given government support until he could find a new job.

The major threat from within the system would seem to be the possibility of a coup by officers or enlisted men of the growing Saudi military forces. However, Saudi military officals denied reports of discontent in the ranks.

A Saudi air force commander, one of 15 members of the royal family serving in the 15,000-man air force, said the personal contact and ties are so close that it is unlikely that any plot within the military would escape detection.

A further check is provided by the organization of the Saudi military into two separate compartments — the 45,000-man regular force headed by Prince Sultan, organized around modern military lines, and the 35,000-man National Guard headed by Prince Abdullah. It is organized on tribal lines.

The major threat from outside the system is the presence of so many foreign workers. They are closely watched by the Saudis, and any suspected troublemakers are sent out of the country.

Considering the vast wealth of Saudi Arabia and the relatively small number of Saudis to share and guard it, the Saudis act and feel extremely vulnerable. Any sign of a security threat, as in the cse of the smuggled weapons, is taken very seriously.

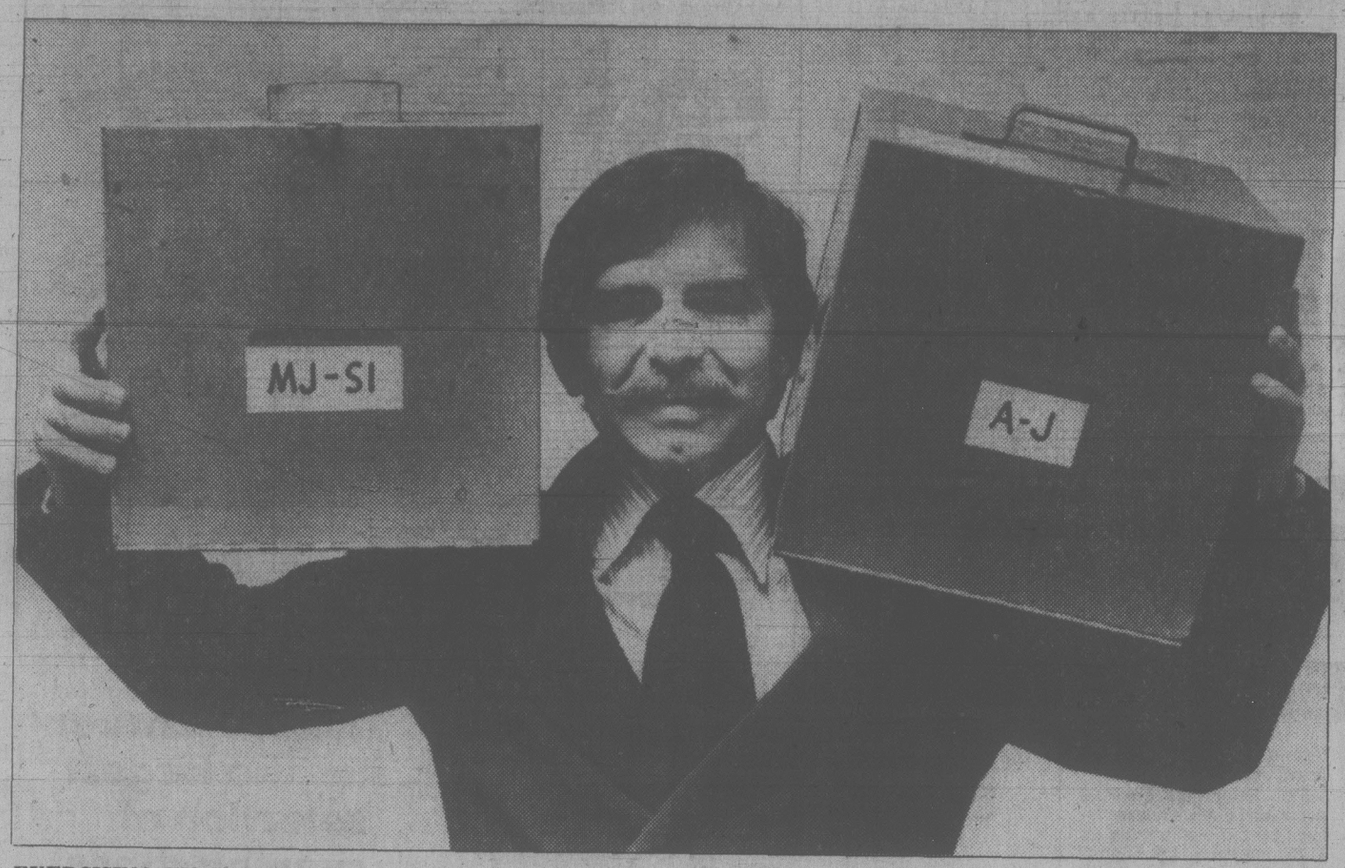
$30M N-Plant Sabotage Bid



EXERCISING HIS BALLOTS — and biceps — Victoria returning officer Mike Hutchison this morning declared himself ready for the fray Thursday when 61,200 Victoria get their chance to tell the politicians how they'e done since the 1975 general election. His advice to voters: try to go to the polls between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. The polls open at 8 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. (Bill Halkett photo)

New Power Facilities Killed by Congress

Times News Services

The House of Representatives Interior Committee, meanwhile, voted overwhelmingly today for a moratorium on construction permits for proposed nuclear power plants.

Vepco inspectors discovered Monday that a corrosive white crystalline substance had been dumped into 62 of 64 fresh, unradiated nuclear fuel elements being stored in a building near its Surry reactor in southeast Virginia.

The fuel was intended for the utility firm's Surry No. 2 unit and represented about one-third of the total fuel needed to operate the unit for a year, utility officials said.

Company officials said today they have cleaned about half the polluted uranium fuel elements.

Vepco vice-president C.M. Stallings told a news conference today, "We completed a preliminary cleanup on 30 of the elements Tuesday night." He said he wasn't sure how long the entire cleaning process would take.

Calling the incident "suspected willful damage," Vepco spokesman August Wallmeyer said the FBI's Richmond office has begun investigating all those who have had recent access to the plant's fuel storage area.

"Obviously, this leads to a whole raft of problems," Wallmeyer said, noting that chief among them is concern over plant security.

"At this point, it's a little early to speculate, but it's a secure plant . . . and it would lead you to believe that it would come from the inside," said Richmond FBI agent Sherrill Law.

At a news conference in Tuesday, Stallings said pollution of the fuel elements had "no effect on the health and safety of the general public or Vepco employees."

The fuel, according to Vepco, began arriving at Surry in February and had been in normal condition then. On April 18, two of the 64 fuel units were inspected and found to be normal.

Stallings said Vepco has no way of knowing whether all the fuel units were unpolluted on that date, but he said he thinks the caustic substance —between a couple of cups to a gallon in each unit — was dumped in "over a period of time."

Security at the Surry plant, located near Jamestown on the James River about 140 miles from Washington, is heavy, Vepco officials said. Entrance to the storage area was restricted to persons who had special "card keys" to open the doors.

Stallings noted, however, that the fuel storage building usually is empty when no fuel is being taken in or out so it would have been possible for someone to move about the fuel elements unobserved.

Cloudy Skies Predicted For Voting

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Clouds will roll in over southern Vancouver Island early Thursday and sprinkle Greater Victoria voters with rain in the afternoon.

But the sombre word from the weatherman isn't expected to dissuade many from voting in B.C.'s 32nd general election, observers say, because the advance poll turnout indicated unusually high interest here.

The polls open at 8 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

Victoria returning officer Mike Hutchison today had some last-minute advice for voters: pick your time to go to the polls.

He said there is always a rush of voters as soon as polls open, and again just before closing.

The best time to cast a ballot is between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., except of course the noon rush which is also a popular voting time, Hutchison said.

That redistribution added another riding to northern Vancouver Island, dividing the Island into nine constituencies with 10 MLAs. Victoria elects two representatives.

There are 1,673,638 registered voters in the province.

Victoria has 61,200 registered to vote, Saanich and the Islands 42,242, Oak Bay-Gordon Head just over 31,000 and Esquimalt-Port Renfrew 34,792.

Voter turnout in Victoria in 1975 was 70.01 per cent, just over the provincial average of 69.76 per cent. In Esquimalt last time, 73.14 per cent voted.

Both Saanich and the Islands with 78.26 per cent and Oak Bay with 78.94 per cent were among the highest in the province.

If a voter discovers his name has been omitted from the voter's list, but feels he is entitled to vote, he can cast a sealed ballot which will be held until his eligibility has been confirmed.

If the voter is found to be eligible, his vote will be counted on the final count May 23 to 25.

Victoria Losing 60 Income Tax Jobs to Surrey

Victoria will lose 60 jobs with the transfer of taxation processing operations to the Lower Mainland, Vancouver Island Revenue Canada director T.S. Blanchard said today.

The move also means taxpayers on the Island must deal with the Surrey office instead of Victoria.

The cutback reduces the local Revenue Canada work force from 230 to 170, but there will be a small increase as the audit functions expand. About 10 auditing jobs will be created by 1980, Blanchard said.

The major transfer to Surrey is the result of a new tax processing system.

At present all tax forms go first to Ottawa for computer check and then back to Victoria for detailed processing.

Starting next spring, all tax forms from B.C. and Alberta will go directly to Surrey where more than 1,000 employees will give them the computer check and the subsequent processing operations.

Instead of communicating with the Victoria office on any follow-up, taxpayers would contact the Surrey office.

Files of local taxpayers will be transferred from Victoria to Surrey.

Blanchard said the Revenue Canada office in Victoria will become mainly a field unit for tax investigations.

The Victoria office space created by the transfer will be turned over to the federal ministry of public works. It is believed some other federal ministry will occupy the extra space in 1980.

Transfer of some employees to Surrey is already under way although the process will not be completed until year's end.

U.N. Forces Confront Israelis in Lebanon

United Press International

Israeli troops backed by tanks and armored cars thrust into Lebanon today in pursuit of a Palestinian suicide squad that fought an hour-long battle inside Israel at a communal settlement.

The Israelis withdrew when the U.N. forces confronted them, U.N. spokesmen in Beirut and Tel Aviv said.

"Our forces were instructed to stand firm," the U.N. spokesman in Tel Aviv said.

Police sources in Beirut said aircraft, presumably Israeli, buzzed the Lebanese capital but drew heavy Palestinian anti-aircraft fire.

The U.N. spokesman in Beirut said the Israelis took up positions in an area controlled by U.N. peacekeeping forces, searched a village but withdrew six hours later,

The Palestinian suicide team infiltrated into the northern Israeli settlement of Marana and fought an hour-long battle with an Israeli patrol, losing two men, the Palestine Front for the Liberation of Palestine said.

The U.N. spokesman said two platoons of Irish U.N. soldiers squared off with the larger Israeli force one mile outside Chaqra, about six miles west of the border with Lebanon and across from Manara, where the Palestinian commandos struck.

Independent reports from the southern Lebanon said about 450 Israeli soldiers backed by 20 tanks, 28 armored personnel carriers and 28 jeeps were involved in the pursuit operation.

A Real Wall St. Bare

NEW YORK (AP) — Muggers miscalculated when they thought a naked man would hesitate to chase them through the Wall Street financial district of Manhattan in midafternoon.

Wearing only shoes and socks, with his attache case for a "fig leaf," stamp dealer Zoltan Gordon Bana raced from a subway station entrance in pursuit of two youths who had robbed him Tuesday and forced him to strip.

A startled police officer, Frank Weber, who was heading back to work from his lunch break, picked up the pursuit and arrested one suspect. The other escaped.

No Gas Crisis' Ad Campaign

Provincial Tourism minister Elwood Veitch today announced he will immediately launch an advertising campaign in California, Oregon and Washington State advising Americans there is no gasoline shortage in B.C.

He was responding to a request from the Victoria tourist industry after some hotels here reported cancellations by Americans who earlier had planned to visit Vancouver Island this summer.

The danger of lost tourist business was discussed by officials of his ministry at a meeting Tuesday and those discussions, plus the request from the Victoria tourist industry, led to his decision this morning to begin a campaign right away, Veitch said.

Funds have already been approved for external advertising and some of this money will be diverted into the emergency campaign.

Visitors Information Centre Ed Higgin said he was delighted by the announcement but that didn't mean the problem had been completed solved.

He said the reports from California get worse. Motorists don't want to drive further from home than half a tank of gas will take them.

Vandal Threat to Girls' Game

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

About 120 young girls may be denied the fun of Little League softball unless something can be done to correct a chronic vandalism problem caused by "punks" at a small neighborhood park in Gordon Head.

The warning will go to Saanich council in a letter from Art Parsons, president of the Gordon Head Little League, who told the Times Tuesday the situation at Blair Park has become intolerable.

He said he has asked Mayor Mel Couvelier for urgent help to ensure the park can be used for the remainder of the league's short nine-week season. The mayor responded by asking him to present his request to a special council meeting next Monday.

Parsons said Blair Park has been hit by vandals twice in the last two weeks. Portable dugouts — worth in materials alone about $250 each wholesale — have been overturned and practically destroyed, with obscenities spray-painted across them.

"A large wooden bench which was last seen high in a tree has now disappeared from the park," he said.

"I have raised five children here and I am just appalled to think that a few punks could force 120 girls out of a youth activity. I can't believe this situation can exist."

Parsons said when he spoke to the mayor this week Couvelier mentioned the possibility of providing permanent concrete dugouts.

He said Saanich police told him it was impossible to provide adequate supervision of public parks with only three officers and two cars assigned to the eastern portion of the municipality.

Police Chief Bob Peterson confirmed today the department doesn't have enough officers to do a proper job of enforcement.

But he said he is aware of the problem at Blair Park and in that general area of Gordon Head. The community services division has been asked to come up with "strategies" along the prevention theme.

With the risk of jagged nails and splinters of wood he doesn't believe it's safe for play. And although the league's coaches are dedicated he says it's unfair to expect them to rebuild the facilities before each game.

"To fold a league because of a handful of juvenile delinquents would be heartbreaking for our youngsters," he added.

Just when they almost had us believing them, in came Health Minister Bob McClelland riding an elephant.

That's the end. We can pardon Monday night's Socred Circus in Vancouver's Coliseum for featuring (along with Premier Bennett) jugglers, people dressed in bear costumes, disco dancers and a woman on a giant unicycle. But an elephant, a live elephant?

Not that supplying cabinet ministers with elephants as standard kit is really all wrong . . . that mode of transport would be in keeping with the speed in which they get things done. Maybe we could have elephant hitching posts installed outside the Legislative Buildings.

But doesn't it make you question the credibility of an individual, of the party and perhaps even of politicians as a whole when, in order to be a big enough man for people to take notice of him, a minister has to make his entrance on the back of an elephant?

Credibility, in fact, has been a big talking point in both provincial and federal election campaigns.

And that's another thing. Did we really have to have two elections on top of each other? One is draining enough.

All we keep hearing about is how exhausting it is for the poor politicians hot on the campaign trail. How Mrs. Bennett almost nodded off during one rally. Well, there are a few of us out here finding it pretty hard to stay awake in the midst of all the political drivel that's been coming our way.

More interesting by far than all the paid political ads (my God, I thought the ones for hairsprays and headache tablets were bad enough) and all the campaign speeches are the letters to the editor.

The mood in many of the letters has been a questioning one — a searching for some kind of commitment from any political party — and a disillusionment at the lack of honesty.

One well-written letter urged both the NDP and Socreds to outline their stand on issues like forestry, fishing, property taxes, ferry improvements, public transit, law enforcement and housing.

We haven't really heard their stand. We've heard them stand on one another. We've heard the NDP tell us what the Socreds have been doing wrong since they've been in power. We've heard the Socreds tell us what the NDP did wrong when they were in power. And we've heard the parties warn what each other will do wrong if either is elected this time. And in the background we've heard the provincial Tories and Liberals say what everyone has been doing wrong.

What a hell of a lot of wrongs! What about someone being specific and telling us what they would do right, given the chance? It would make them all seem a little more believable if only some of them would admit they have no answers to unemployment or high costs. But no. We couldn't have that. We mustn't be negative. Ha!

"It is interesting how some politicians try to impress the electorate with lies just to gain votes," the writer said. "They must think that everyone is stupid enough to believe their honesty even when we know that everything they say is pure lies."

Didn't someone say once a change is as good as a holiday? Well, for the sake of those who just might not be able to afford a holiday the way things are going, maybe it's time for a change.

Maybe, too, Bill Bennett and the Socreds had an ulterior motive when they chose the date they did for an election. This is Be Kind to Animals Week.

And finally, out of all the signs I've read recently I like the one folksinger-sailor-boatbuilder Tony Latimer has in front of his home in Cobble Hill.

Right across the country road from a neighbor's signs imploring residents to vote for Manly and Wallace, Tony has two large pieces of paper stretched between chunks of wood.

On one it says Hooray, Hooray, the First of May; Outdoor Loving Begins Today. And on the other it reads Remember, No Matter Who You Vote For, a Politician Still Gets In.

It'll Be Close, Say Young Pundits

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

If the youngsters in Gerry Bell's creative writing course at View Royal elementary school are any indication, Thursday's provincial election promises to be a close battle between the two major parties.

About half the youngsters, aged 11 to 12, picked the Socreds to win; the other half chose the New Democratic Party.

Nearly all felt the other two parties, Liberals and Conservatives, would make slight gains.

And one boy — could he be a cynic? — predicted the number of vacancies in the Legislature, which stood at two at dissolution, would soar to 10 after the election.

The forecasts were made Tuesday in a questionnaire that Bell, principal of the school, gave the 21 students in his class to measure their awareness of the provincial campaign.

Most of the students knew the two main candidates in the riding (Esquimalt-Port Renfrew). Seventeen correctly named Socred Lyle Kahl and 16 got the NDP's Frank Mitchell. Eight students recalled the Conservative candidate Bill Langlois' name but only one included Western Independence candidate Doug Christie.

There was some obvious confusion with the federal campaign in the overlapping riding of Esquimalt-Malahat. Five students put down federal NDP Jim Manly as a provincial candidate, four named Liberal David Anderson and one recorded Conservative Don Taylor.

John Mika was named as a candidate by 10 students. Mika is provincial NDP standard-bearer in the adjacent riding of Saanich and the Islands.

The issues as seen by the children were wide-ranging. Several noted the new hospital, taxes and insurance. One pupil, Tiffany, added fuel and cost of living to her list. Brian recorded labor, ecology and law in that order of priority. Johnny put down "working hours."

Greg said "some of the issues are people sobbing about if you should own your house or not."

Mark replied the issue is "Why is 'Benet' keeping empty promises?"

Wendy noted with candor that "the issues in this election are I don't know."

But perhaps the most intriguing response came from Marcus: "Some issues I have heard are the NDP said that they would lower car insurance and they would get proper knives and forks on the ferrys."

Sasha replied it is because "people get tired of the guys they elected last time."

Mark felt it is because people want to get rid of "crudy candidates and presidents."

Brian said frankly "I don't really know why," but Nancy offered this answer: "I think maybe the people don't want Kahl any more or someone that might give them more of what people want."

Only one student could name the leaders of the three major parties. Several felt Kahl and Mitchell were the heads of their respective parties. Two students put down Mika's name as leader of the Conservatives, and Langlois was touted the Liberal leader by one student.

Johnny took a stab at naming the leaders: "Bennet," he ventured, then admitted "I don't know . . . Mike Young?"

The Party Faithful Slings Some Mud

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

As an example, Judy Nyquist, Socred candidate Sam Bawlf's constituency secretary, asked NDP hopeful Charles Barber if he believed in gainful employment.

She asked him why he had always lived off government grants and never held a job "like the rest of us."

Barber turned the question on Nyquist, saying it was a bit much coming from a person who had once worked for the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children and was now "feeding at the public trough" as Bawlf's secretary.

He added jokingly that he believed in gainful employment for everyone but himself.

During the meeting attended by about 65 people at the Jaycees Hall on Quadra, both the NDP and the Socred candidates tossed out figures to prove the other party's administration was fiscally irresponsible.

"What price do we have to pay for that?" asked Young.

Barber and his colleague, Gordon Hanson, said the Socreds lack credibility and during their term in office have contributed to increased inflation and unemployment.

The two Conservative candidates, Jack Lindsay and Maggi Lynn, criticized the two parties for "tarring one another" and lauded the value of having a third choice in provincial politics.

During one attack on the Socreds' economic policies, Hanson quoted from a report by Dr. John McCallum of the department of economics and commerce at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby.

McCallum studied the effects of B.C. government policies on inflation and unemployment during the years 1976-78 and concludes that Socred policies managed to raise both.

He says in his report, completed last month, that by increasing private sector prices — sales taxes — and public sector taxes — car insurance, ferries, buses — the government raised the price level and raised unemployment by reducing the purchasing power of the private sector.

If the government had refrained from raising the sales tax or prices of public sector goods or services there could have been a one-per-cent reduction in the consumer price index, an additional 7,000 permanent jobs and a reduction in the unemployment rate by about .4 per cent, McCallum says.

When asked about the rate increases, Bawlf said people pay for such public services either through rates or taxes.

"There's no magic tree where the money comes from," he said to some applause.

He was also questioned on the party's five-per-cent guideline for hospital budget increases.

Bawlf said the figure was just that, a guideline, and not a firm position.

He said current charges of hospital cutbacks and layoffs as a result of the guideline were an example of the big lie technique where no matter how untrue a statement is, if it is repeated often enough people begin to believe it.

Barber seized on the issue and appeared to have the support of those in attendance when he said the doctors and nurses have been criticising the Socreds for their cold-hearted policies.

He said the medical staff at Royal Jubilee Hospital has come out publicly on the issue as has the B.C. Medical Journal.

"Either you believe all of these doctors and nurses are involved in some commie plot . . . or what is happening is a cutback in services."

Second CUPE Rejection

The Capital Region District's 200 employees have become the second group of public sector workers to reject the "final offer" from the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

Members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1978, voted 56 per cent to reject the offer at a meeting Tuesday night.

The employer package, which includes a 7.25-per-cent increase in each year of a two-year agreement, was earlier turned down by the 300-member Local 388, representing city inside workers.

Local 1978 secretary Margaret Gibson said the main issue is not wages but what management wants to remove from the contract.

One contentious demand by the GVLRA is for removal of a clause allowing for paid leave for union people attending negotiations or arbitration hearings.

The GVLRA wants the union to pick up the tab for the employees' lost time.

Gibson said the direction the local's negotiators received from the membership Tuesday night was they would be willing to accept a one-year agreement with a 7.25-per-cent increase if the paid-leave clause was left intact.

Aldermen Alarmed By Spiralling Crime

Two Victoria aldermen have expressed alarm over the city's spiralling crime rate.

Ald. Bill McElroy Tuesday called on the city to hire 10 more police officers and Ald. Robin Blencoe today said the situation is so urgent it calls for emergency action by the Victoria Police Board.

Blencoe said a major offensive has to be launched immediately against breaking-and-entry, vandalism and other property crimes.

In 1978 break-ins and related property crimes jumped almost 20 per cent in Victoria. Some 2,197 buildings were forcibly entered while there were 1,532 reported cases of vandalism and 4,198 thefts under $200.

Blencoe said the recently released crime statistics are shocking, but the police board is taking no action on the problem.

For the past two years Blencoe has been advocating new community-based team policing methods for the city, and one year ago won an agreement from the police board to look at the possibility of alternative policing methods.

Blencoe said the lack of action by the board, which is chaired by Mayor Mike Young, has lead the city into an emergency situation.

"The community cannot afford to wait any longer. While the police board studies, citizens are fast becoming apprehensive for the safety of their homes and businesses," said Blencoe. "We cannot wait another year while the crime rate goes up another 10 or 15 per cent."

Blencoe said "there have been indications for two years that it was essential we get into preventative policing on a scale at least equal to that of detection policing if we were to avoid the crime rates that are before us today.

"However, the powers-that-be, including the chairman of the police board (Young), chose to ignore those indications.

"Now . . . we are having to react to an emergency situation."

In a letter to the board Blencoe calls for an all-out attack.

He said a program aimed at property crimes should include:

— A greater emphasis on preventative measures such as Neighborhood Watch and Business Watch.

— An effort to involve neighborhood groups in fighting crime.

Blencoe also called on the commission to report on its study into community-based policing concepts and to set up a pilot project to test neighborhood policing.

In a separate statement Tuesday, Ald. McElroy also expressed concern about Victoria's soaring crime rate.

He said the cityshould take the $352,000 it recently cut from the 1979 budget and use it to hire 10 more policemen.

Interviewed following a special council meeting which saw the $32 million city budget passed, McElroy said the money recently cut from the budget should be used elsewhere.

He said the city is in the business of providing services to the public and the rising crime rate shows more police officers are needed.

McElroy made the suggestion during the council meeting, but was ignored by all but Blencoe, who supported the suggestion.

"There tends to be a fascination in budgets with capital expenditure. Everyone's happy to buy a big, shiny new piece of equipment, but when you start to talk about manpower and salaries, that's when people crack down," McElroy said.

Centennial Bomb A Dud

The Armed Forces bomb squad detonated a device police found in the pocket of a man picked up for being intoxicated.

Police cordoned off the area for more than an hour while experts examined the device, then exploded it in a concrete planter.

A spokesman said today the man was rummaging through garbage cans on Esquimalt Road at 1:30 p.m. when he came across a small package wrapped in black tape with wires protruding. He stuffed it in his pocket.

An officer spotted the man in the square about 7:40 p.m. and was taking him to the police station when he discovered the package in his pocket. He gingerly put it in the planter.

Boat Sinks But Two Safe

They are Clive Amos and deekhand Ed Jeffer.

Book-Keeper Jailed Two Years for Theft

A 54-year-old Victoria book-keeper was sentenced in county court today to two years less one day in jail for theft of $7,470 from Sound Hounds record and stereo equipment store where she worked last year.

Grace Fisher pleaded guilty before Judge Montague Drake, who in brief remarks said that in crimes of this sort he had to be concerned with the interests of the community.

Her lawyer, Mike Hutchison, had argued in favor of probation, saying jail would do nothing for her or society. What she needed, he said, was extended probation including psychological counselling.

He said her problem was that she couldn't cope with stress and was the victim of the credit society in a scheme which was not clever or sophisticated and which would inevitably be detected.

Crown counsel J.W. Anderson said during the five months or so that Mrs. Fisher worked for Sound Hounds she was responsible for the firm's money.

She removed $7,470 by a system called "lapping" in which cash from daily receipts was removed and the shortage made up by incoming cheques from later transactions.

He said she was sentenced in Vancouver in 1967 to six years in the penitentiary for theft of $249,000 over a period of nine years from a branch of the Bank of Montreal where she had worked as an accountant.

She kept deposits and failed to process the accounts into the records, thus producing an apparent balance.

He said there was no suggestion that she did not appreciate what she did in either crime.

Hutchison said she spent only two years in penitentiary before being released on parole and coming to Victoria where she worked as a book-keeper until last May.

Four years ago, he said, she received an inheritance of $25,000 and developed a lifestyle she was incapable of supporting, including a locked-in house lease costing more than $800 per month.

He said she succumbed to the easy accessibility to cash at Sound Hounds.

Judge Drake, in addition to the jail term, ordered her placed on probation for two years.

There will no mail deliveries except for special delivery items and post offices will be closed Monday, May 21, in observation of Victoria Day. Street letter box collections will be made on a Sunday service basis.

Soviets, U.S. Reach Pact On Curbing N-Weapons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union announced today they have reached general agreement on a SALT II pact for further limitation of strategic weapons.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, the principal U.S. arms negotiator for the past two years, made the historic announcement at the White House nearly seven years after the second round of strategic arms limitation talks began.

Some technical drafting problems have to be worked out by teams of negotiators in Geneva before the full treaty package is released.

That work is expected to take two or three weeks, but no major difficulties are anticipated.

The negotiations, which began in 1972, produced a 100-page treaty package that will limit each side to 2,250 nuclear weapon launchers or bombers by the end of 1981. It will also limit the kinds of technology that can be used in the launchers.

Critics claim Soviet compliance with SALT II is not verifiable, especially with the loss of two key U.S. monitoring bases in Iran. They contend the treaty guarantees the Soviets an unacceptable edge in total nuclear explosives — 10.8 million pounds to the U.S. total of 7.2 million pounds.

Backers of the treaty say that is essentially offset by the U.S. superiority in the number of warheads — 9,550 to the Soviet total of 4,950.

The new agreement incorporates several historic firsts:

—The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed on exact parity of launchers in their nuclear arsenals.

—The Soviets have produced figures on their own nuclear arsenal, the "data base" that will be the starting point for the weapons limits.

—Actual destruction of nuclear weapons will be involved, including 270 on the Soviet side to get them under the 2,250 limit before the end of 1981. Both sides must be down to 2,400 launchers within six months of the treaty going into effect.

The package includes a treaty that consists of a preamble and 19 articles. It limits the total nuclear arsenals on both sides, but also places sublimits on certain kinds of weapons, including 820 land-based ICBMs with multiple warheads, 1,320 missiles or bombers to be counted as Mirvs, and 1,200 Mirv missiles.

THE OUTCASTS — by Ben Wicks

Gagging Ruff 'an Error'

Labor Minister Allan Williams said today the Human Rights Commission erred in instructing Human Rights Branch director Kathleen Ruff to keep quiet on human rights matters before the commission.

Williams said the commission has no authority to issue such an instruction and added he plans to meet with commission members later in the month to be sure they get the message.

On Monday the B.C. Civil Liberties Association released a letter sent by commission chairman Margaret Strongitharm to Ruff on March 23 in which Strongitharm said the commission had passed a motion instructing Ruff "to refrain from making any statements to the media on any matters that may come before the commission or board of inquiry."

The letter appeared to contradict a news release issued by the commission on May 1 wherein Strongitharm denied press allegations the commission was seeking either directly or indirectly to constrain the freedom of speech of the branch director.

"There is no substance to this allegation," the news release said.

Williams said the commission has no say in how the branch should be run. Under the legislation they are separate bodies only connected by the role Ruff plays as chief executive officer of the commission.
